SWAPPING HORSES.

An Animal That Was Too Hard For General Grant to Manage.

General Horace Porter, in his "Campaigning With Grant" in The Century, tells the following anecdote of his chief during a ride from Petersburg to City Point:

Owing to the heat and dust the long ride was exceedingly uncomfortable. My best horse had been hurt, and I was mounted on a bay colt that had a trot which necessitated no end of "saddle pounding" on the part of the rider, and if distances are to be measured by the amount of fatigue endured, this exertion added many miles to the trip. The general was riding his black pony Jeff Davis. This smooth little pacer shuffled along at a gait which was too fast for a walk and not fast enough for a gallop, so that all the other horses had to move at a brisk trot to keep up with him.

When we were about five miles from headquarters, the general said to me in a joking way: "You don't look comfortable on that horse. Now I feel about as fresh as when we started out."

I replied, "It makes all the difference in the world, general, what kind of horse one rides."

He remarked, "Oh, all horses are pretty much alike as far as the comfort of their gait is concerned."

"In the present instance," I answered, "I don't think you would like to swap with me, general."

He said at once, "Why, yes; I'd just as lief swap with you as not," and threw himself off his pony and mounted my uncomfortable beast, while I put myself astride of Jeff. The general had always been a famous rider, even when a cadet at West Point. When he rode or drove a strange horse, not many minutes elapsed before he and the animal seemed to understand each other perfectly. In my experience I have never seen a better rider, or one who had a more steady seat, no matter what sort of horse he rode. But on this occasion it soon became evident that his body and that of the animal were not always in touch, and he saw that all the party were considerably amused at the joggling to which he was subjected. In the meantime Jeff Davis was pacing along with a smoothness which made me feel as if I were seated in a rocking chair. When we reached headquarters, the general dismounted in a manner which showed that he was pretty stiff from the ride. As he touched the ground he turned and said with a quizzical look, "Well, I must acknowledge that animal is pretty rough."

Why He Enjoyed It.

Hen Peck—I enjoy being an election judge. It gives one such a sense of security.

Tim Town—How so?
Hen Peck—Why, the law prevents my wife from loafing around within 100 feet of the polls.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

On the Road.

She—Have you got your bicycle yet?
He—Oh, yes!

"I don't see you on the road as much this season as I did last."

"No; I'm on my wheel more now. I ride better, you know."—Yonkers Statesman.

The Pound of Flesh.

Willie—Say, pa.

Pa—Well, what is it?

Willie—Why do they always weigh the babies as soon as they're born? Do people pay for them by the pound, the same as for raw meat?—Cleveland Leader.

Did He Take the Hint?

He—Do you believe in palmistry; that you can tell anything by the hand?

She—Certainly. Now, for example, if I had a certain kind of ring on a certain finger of my left hand, people would know that I was engaged.—Truth.

Perfectly True.

"Mrs. Skimmills says that her husband never spoke a hasty word to her in his life," said the lady who gossips.

"That's perfectly true," replied Miss Cayenne. "The dear man stutters."—Washington Star.
