Major Role In Clinics Taken By City Schools

A. Fremont Archer, chairman of the Red Cross blood donor committee for Charlottetown commented last night on the enthusiasm being displayed by Red Cross members who are students in both the elementary and high school grades in Charlottetown and who are playing a major role in the preparation for next week's clinics which take place at the Confederation Centre.

He remarked particularly on the fact that the grade 7 students at Birchwood High under the leadership of their teacher, Leo Callaghan who is a faithful donor, are the official distributors of the posters which are used to advertise the clinics in the business establishments in the city.

The boys were busy distributing these posters on Wednesday afternoon. Another crew of boys from Birchwood will be on hand at the Confederation Centre at five o'clock on Monday afternoon to help with the unloading and setting up of the equipment so that all will be in readiness for the opening session which gets underway at eight o'clock and continues until 10 that night.

High School Red Cross members from Birchwood, Queen Charlotte, Notre Dame and Charlottetown Rural will be among the many volunteers who will carry out various tasks in connection with each of the four evening clinics being held on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week.

COMMITTEES ACTIVE

Active committees are at work at both St. Dunstan's and Prince of Wales where keen competitions are being promoted for "blood donor supremacy". John Rapattoni is the newly appointed chairman of the blood donor committee at St. Dunstan's where there is an "inter-class competition" in progress, and James Beardsley is this year's blood donor chairman at Prince of Wales where the competition is between the "boys" and the "girls".

A clinic at the "gym" at St. Dunstan's will be held on Monday afternoon between one and four p.m. to open the four-day series in Charlottetown. Prince of Wales students will attend the regular clinics at the Confederation Centre.

now allowable on gifts to universities."

"This great national plan—it is not negative, it is positive—will be done so all Canadians, regardless of their financial position, may be able to take their place in our nation."

It would all be done with recognition of the provinces' constitutional position on education, he said.

Mr. Diefenbaker said that by designating the entire Atlantic area as special area for economic growth, he would be carrying out the recommendations of the Atlantic Provinces Economic Council. And at the same time "we propose to see that the Atlantic Development Board will have sufficient money to carry out its demands."

MONIES REDUCED

When his Conservative government established the board to help develop the region "we gave it unlimited monies, but this government reduced it to $100,000,000."

Prime Minister Pearson did not act in the spirit of Confederation when he submitted the off-shore minerals issue to the Supreme Court of Canada, said the Conservative leader.

"If elected, we intend to deny an application to the court and get together in the spirit of Confederation to arrive at an agreement that is fair, reasonable and proper. . . . This is not a matter of legal interpretation."

Mr. Diefenbaker was flanked on the platform by Premier Robert Stanfield and the party's Nova Scotia candidates in the election. "Let's get together," he said, "and put an end to division and disruption and the the uncertainty of an uncertain government."
