MOMENT'S DECISION

By Marie B. Ryan
When I was a youngster, girls and boys were considered "mere children" until their late teens. The decision made "on their own" were noticeably few. But now is another day, another age, with another set of behavior patterns, I read and hear that boys and girls begin their "social drinking" when they are twelve or thirteen. In one Long Island high school a study showed that 86 per cent of the boys and girls used alcohol in some form; that means that some of those boys and girls were around thirteen. Regular drinkers had all begun before they were sixteen years of age.

Some day, or some night, almost every teen-ager must either take his first drink or refuse to take it. That moment's decision will go a long way in determining his future. A refusal to take the first drink is the best preventive of alcoholism that medical or scientific authorities have yet found. It is also the surest preventive of a potential life of regret.

It defies human understanding that any parent will encourage his or her child to drink in the home, yet it is equally absurd to think that a home can serve cocktails and then forbid the children to drink. Likewise it is unreasonable for a home to serve alcoholic drinks, or for parents in the home to drink and then try to make a show of forbidding their children to drink, either at home or elsewhere. Thus the great moment of decision is forced upon children from such homes. In this Long Island high school 74 per cent of the youth had permission from their parents to drink in the home as well as away from it.

Apparently the studies in our schools and colleges about the harmful effects of narcotics and other drugs are not taking care of the problem. Moralizing lectures are obviously ineffective on children when the home is where they come keep and serve all kinds of alcoholic beverages. France, with its "harmless wines" and water "unfit for human consumption," has found it necessary to step in through governmental agencies to curb excessive drinking by its people. Drinking is undermining the health of the French people and has truly become a national problem. Perhaps the United States might learn from the French and instead of spending, as at present, $1.30 for liquor for every $1 on public schools,

A POPULAR BUDDY
Folk-singer and guitar player Alan Martin of Yarmouth, N.S., is one of the most popular soldiers in the 2nd Battalion, Canadian Guards, now training at Campeagetown. Here he holds the close attention of three buddies. at least reverse that ratio. A dispatch from Vienna, Austria, reports a city official as saying that about 10 per cent of that city's population of 1,600,000 are habitual drinkers, with the majority of those classified as drunkards. Strangely enough, they are not called "alcoholics," nor are they referred to as being "sick."

It is conservatively estimated that the United States has 4,000,000 alcoholics and 3,000,000 habitual heavy drinkers, with an average of 250,000 a year being added to the 7,000,000. Then we are told that 70 out of every 100 alcoholics started drinking during their teens. If youth only knew about that great moment's decision!

Perhaps they need something more than mere knowledge, for they have been given facts now for a long time. Unfortunately such education is counterbalanced by baneful and constant advertising in magazines and over radio and television and, what is more serious, by their parents' example in their own homes.

It is during that "coltish" period in his life, when a youth especially enjoys doing the risky, that the great decision must be made. Teen-agers think they have to follow the crowd and are dreadfully afraid of being

Now Use Carbon 14 to Study Growth And Use Of Trees

WHIPPANY, N. J. (CP) — A company near this community has started raising a crop of radioactive trees.

Rayonier Incorporated, chemical cellulose manufacturer with extensive holdings in British Columbia, hopes the experiment will mean a new era in forest chemistry and conservation. The company held a demonstration for the press to show how the technique works.

TREE GETS SHOT

Bud-eyed New York reporters watched as a scientist injected called a wet blanket. A popular teacher in a Mid-west high school simply refuses to chaperone a party of high-school youngsters if there is to be any drinking. However this teacher remains popular, and the students respect her good judgment so much that they refrain from having any kind of booze as part of the refreshments. It is false to believe that there is safety in teaching youth to drink in moderation. There is no safety in drinking in any degree. An immoderate drinker cannot be taught to drink moderately, for his habits is already formed. To teach those who do not now drink how to drink moderately is like telling some-lines the current experiment can lead to many improvements in the some 500 products made from its chemical cellulose, which includes rayon, cellophane, tire cord, sausage casings, acetate and many plastics. Scientists also demonstrated a new experimental rayon spinning machine, designed for the production of either high-strength tire yarn or staple fibre for subsequent testing.
