Thousands of Mexican Dollars.

"It is not often that men have an opportunity to make themselves rich, especially when all they have to do is to stoop down and pocket the dollars," said Alfred Louia, an old Mexican soldier. "I was a soldier under General Scott during the Mexican war, and after the battle of Buena Vista I found myself cut off from my command. Four others of my men were with me, and a detour through the woods was taken in hopes of reaching our regiment, from which we had been cut off during the last charge. As we tramped through the thick brush and carefully avoided stepping on dead and wounded Mexicans, we came upon a stout wooden chest, bound with iron hoops, about two feet square. One of the boys gave it a kick, but failed to move it, and he then tried to lift it, with no better results. Sticking his bayonet under the hasp which held the lid so tightly, it gave way, and the lid was raised, displaying thousands of shining $20 gold pieces.

"It was the Mexican treasure box, and the money was to pay the Mexican troops. It had been dumped in the chapter by the carrier, hoping that it might be secured after the battle. The other boys began filling their bootlegs and pockets with the precious metal, but I didn't touch a piece of it. After they had loaded themselves with all they could carry they wanted me to help myself to the many hundreds of dollars remaining, but I considered them the same as robbers. While they were debating as to the disposition of the remainder our colonel rode up, and noting the treasure chest placed us all on guard and we had to stand there all night watching that box. The other boys secured several hundred dollars more of the coin, which was carried away next morning, and each man buried what he couldn't conveniently carry.

"After we were discharged the boys returned and secured their treasure, which amounted to about $2,700 apiece. I don't think I would let such a chance to gather money slip again, but I am now an old man, and that was my only opportunity in a lifetime."—St. Louis Republic.

Instinct and Knowledge in Animals.

A cat carried 100 miles in a basket, a dog taken perhaps 500 miles by rail, in a few days may have found their way back to the starting point. So we have often been told, and no doubt the thing has happened. We have been astonished at the wonderful intelligence displayed. Magic, I should call it. Last week I heard of a captain who sailed from Aberdeen to Arbroath. He left behind him a dog which, according to the story, had never been in Arbroath, but when he arrived there the dog was waiting on the quay. I was expected to believe that the dog had known his master's destination and been able to inquire the way overland to Arbroath. Truly marvelous! But really it is time to inquire more carefully as to what these stories do mean. We must cease to ascribe our intelligence to animals and learn that it is we that often possess their instinct.

A cat on a farm will wander many miles in search of prey and will therefore be well acquainted with the country for miles around. It is taken 50 miles away. Again it wanders and comes across a bit of country it knew before. What more natural than that it should go to its old home? Carrier pigeons are taught "homeing" by taking them gradually longer flights from home, so that they may learn the look of the country. We cannot always discover that a dog actually was acquainted with the route by which it wanders home, but it is quite absurd to imagine, as most people at once do, that it was a perfect stranger to the lay of the land.—A. J. Mackintosh in London Spectator.

Trees in French Cities.

One of the chief beauties of the larger French cities and second only to their edifices and monuments are the trees. The almost interminable vistas of chestnuts and acacias stretching along the broad and well paved avenues as far as the eye can reach, their bending branches almost touching one another in an endless arch of verdure, form not only a delightful perspective for the eye, but serve to add beauty to cities already beautiful and grace and symmetry to whatever might be harsh and forbidding.

This, however, is not the result of nature's handiwork alone, for science and art have lent their aid. The planting, as well as the maintenance of the trees in French cities, is an item of no little importance in the annual budget prepared by the municipal council, which does not look upon their preservation as of less consequence than the repairing of the roadways or the lighting of the streets.—London Times.

How Blue Paper was Discovered.

It was by the purest accident that the simple process of tinting white paper was discovered. It was the result of sheer carelessness in a woman. The wife of an English paper maker named William East, accidentally dropped the "blue-bag," a small bag full of bluing with which she was about to blue her washing, into a vat of pulp, where it lay long enough to give the entire mass a bluish tinge before, to her consternation, she recovered it. So terrified was she at the result of her gross carelessness and its disastrous result that she dared not mention the fact to her husband, whose disapproval at what he considered the discoloration and destruction of the entire lot of paper made from the mass was his worry for months.

He considered the paper spoiled and an entire loss, but suffered it to remain in an out of the way place as unsalable stock for four years, when, in order to get it out of the way and to make room for better stock, he sent it to his agent in London, asking him to get rid of it at any price. To the paper maker's utter surprise, in a short time he received from his agent an order for a great quantity of the bluish paper and found upon inquiry concerning the sanity of the agent that the bluish paper being a novelty had taken wonderfully with the public. But East was in a dilemma, for he had no idea as to how to give the blue tinge to the paper ordered by his agent and wearily tried without result for many days and nights.

Mentioning his trouble to his wife one day she admitted her carelessness and told of the way in which the pulp happened to become spoiled by the bag of bluing. The paper maker was overjoyed at the revelation, found it an easy task to give the tinge to his white paper and until the time of his death, which occurred many years after, he was unable to supply the great demand for blue paper, so acceptable and relieving to the eye of the writer.—Boston Herald.

An Old Woman's Cure For Dyspepsia.

"The most remarkable thing that has ever occurred to me in my earthly career," said Eugene McKelvey, "occurred some years ago when I was afflicted with dyspepsia. I had a bad case, I assure you. Oh, I was all broke up. Food was disgusting. I had no appetite, and I just walked around looking for some place to lay down and die. Some time passed, and I grew worse. I saw myself a physical wreck, and try as I might I simply couldn't revive appetite nor ambition. Finally I ran into an old woman, a kind of witch I guess—old women are always witches when they dress in fielded garments and predict to you—who said that I would get well if I should go to a certain farm and three times a day eat an ear of corn to a white pig and then listen to it eat. I do not believe in such rites; but, dear me, I was so sick that I was willing to try anything.

"So I bought a white pig, secured a pen for it within the mentioned farm limits, and daily made three journeys with an ear of corn that I threw in and then watched the pig eat. Well, do you know the sound of that pig crunching and sucking those corn grains made me hungry. Oh, I enjoyed the sensation so much. It made me ravenous. When I returned from my walk I wanted to eat. So I continued visiting the white pig and eating three good meals a day until I was myself again and as healthy as I am now. I don't care to understand the whyness of it now. I am only too glad to be well."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Getting a Dead Man Out of a Hotel.

"I was stopping at the United States hotel in New York several years ago," said Mr. William I. Montague, "and while there formed a very pleasant acquaintance with the chief clerk. We were chatting one afternoon when a bellboy came to him and stated the man in No. 36 was dead. He had been ailing for some time and had probably died of what doctors now call heart failure. The hotel was full of guests, and how to remove the man without arousing their suspicions was a puzzling question. The deceased had a sister living on Thirty-first street, and it was decided to carry the body to her home. A hack was called, and two of the stoutest porters were called upon to dress the body in everyday costume, and with one on each side walk him down stairs as if he was in a mandarin state of intoxication. Everything worked to perfection, and in a half hour the dead body had been seated in the hack and driven away, none of the guests being the wiser for what had happened."—St. Louis Republic.

What the Growing Generation Wants.

There is one great fault with the growing generation. The young men want to get rich too fast. With wealth going to waste all around them they cannot find it in their souls to be patient. They are not content to plod along as their fathers did before them and slowly lay up a fortune. They must have it now, today, this instant. When they go into an enterprise, they want capital and lots of it. They want to begin on a big scale and electrify the world.

It is not the age of saving, but of spending. Speculation is the craze of the hour. Every man wants to make more than he can earn by the sweat of his brow. He must double his money in a night and quadruple it the next day. It is an altogether artificial existence. Contentment is not sought nowadays. All that men want is excitement.—New York Tribune.

1893 SWIFT!

THAT THE "SWIFT" is the best wheel made in ENGLAND, and that it is second to none in AMERICA, any unprejudiced wheelman will say after a fair test of this Machine's powers. Here are a few plain reasons why the SWIFT, made by the Coventry Machinists Company, Coventry, England, the oldest Cycle Manufacturers in the world, is the acme of all that is great and good in a strictly high-grade wheel:—

BECAUSE it is simple, and the adjustment and bearings accurate.

BECAUSE it is light and strong—correct proportions not weight give strength.

BECAUSE its roller forged chain reduces friction to a minimum.

BECAUSE it is not possible to make a better wheel.

Many more equally strong reasons can be given why the "SWIFT" is THE wheel. I will have a sample wheel here in a few days. Hold your orders until you have seen it. Now is the time to buy the "SWIFT."
