The Youngster Cuts His Finger.

"Well," said Mr. Goslington, "the youngster has cut his finger. The only surprising thing is that he didn't do it the first day he got the knife. How he did it he doesn't know himself, except that the knife slipped and the first thing he knew his finger was bleeding. Then he ran to his mother. His face was white, but he didn't cry, which I thought was very brave, and I think so still. His mother washed the finger gently and then bound it up with a strip of soft, worn, white cotton cloth tied around not with a piece of common cord, but with a narrow strip torn off the edge of the cloth itself. I heard her tearing it, and I thought it sounded familiar, and then I remembered that was the way my mother used to do up my finger."

"Then the boy went around with that finger held out straight from the rest of the hand and with a solemn look on his face, but he couldn't stay solemn long, and it was surprising how quickly his finger healed too. Then his mother put a coat over it, a finger cut from an old kid glove (just what my mother used to do, too, and I wonder if all mothers do these things just alike), to protect it for a day or two more until it got fully well. That was wholly new to him, and it pleased him very much. He wore the glove finger with the proud but reserved dignity of one convalescing from a saber stroke instead of a cut from his first knife, and it all made me feel young again myself.—New York Sun.

Uses For Cork.

Among the many articles made from cork waste is the familiar cork grip for bicycle handles. By a secret process the waste is pressed into the required shape, and, strange to say, the grips thus made are stronger and more durable than those manufactured from a cork wood, although the latter gives a much smoother finish. Cork slabs for insulating purposes, life preservers, cork soles and insoles and penholders are also made from cork waste. It is very largely used for the filler in the lining of cold storage and ice houses, since cork is a nonconductor of heat.

Another and a unique use of cork is that to which it is put in the interior ironwork and plates of ironclads and steamers between the bottom of the vessel and the second or false floor in order to prevent rust. The interior surface of the ironwork is coated with paint, and while the latter is still wet it is powdered with cork dust in the same way that wood is sanded to resemble stone. The waste sometimes takes the place of asbestos in covering steam pipes. Both cork wood and waste make a very desirable handle or grip for fish poles, which is a comparatively recent idea. Cork hats and helmets, gill or seine-corks, ring buoys and mooring buoys, cork fenders for vessels and cork caps or washers for tops of cans represent also some of the uses of this article.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

woman who has tried it this spring. "When my fancy began to turn seriously to that tired feeling with budding trees and buzzing bees, which it does every year as surely as the youth's does to love, my physician advised me to give tonics the go by and to try instead dry salt baths. I nearly filled a large earthen jar with the coarsest salt I could get and added enough water to this to make a sort of thick salt paste, but not enough to dissolve the mineral. Every morning when I get up I take this up in handfuls and rub it briskly over my body. Next I jump into a tub of clear, cold water and take a thorough dousing, but in a great hurry. This being done, I take a brisk rub down with a Turkish towel. The effect is delicious. It gives one a sense of exhilaration. But the best part of the dry salt bath is not the feeling of freshness and renewed life that it imparts, but the soft, satiny texture of the skin."—Exchange.

The Leaf Cutter Bee.

A writer in Knowledge describes the interesting operations of the bee called the "leaf cutter." This insect drills in a sand bank a hole 10 inches deep and half an inch in diameter and divides it into about a dozen compartments or cells. Each cell is composed of pieces of leaf, cut into proper shapes and carefully fitted together. Rose leaves and sweet pea leaves are among the favorites of the bees.

The cutting is done with the jaws, while the six legs hold the leaf in position and enable the insect to turn itself about with the precision of a pair of compasses. Some of the cut pieces are perfect circles. Others are oblong figures of varying proportions. Having cut out the segment of leaf, an operation requiring about 20 seconds, the bee carries it to the sand bank and then returns for more materials. When a piece has been nearly cut off, the bee, in order to prevent tearing, poises itself in the air with its wings and completes the operation with a clean cut.

Wanted Them Soled.

Officer (to new servant)—Murphy, I have left my mess boots out this morning. I want them soled.

Private Murphy—Very good, sor.

Officer (later in the day)—Did you take those boots, Murphy?

Private Murphy (feeling in his pocket and putting on the table 18 pence)—Yes, sor, and that's all I could get for them. The corporal who bought them said he would have given 2 shillings had it been pay day. (Collapse of officer.)—London Tit-Bits.

THE ONLY HOPE!

For Victims of Bright's Disease: is Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Not a day passes on which the newspapers do not record the death of one or more persons from Bright's Disease. Already its victims number hundreds of thousands. Day by day the awful total grows larger. No class is safe from this destroyer. War and intemperance, with all their miseries and fatalities, are not responsible for as many deaths as have been caused by Bright's Disease. Yet, there is a way of resisting it; of drawing its poisoned fangs, and making it as harmless as a summer breeze. That great medicine, Dodd's Kidney Pills, has cured thousands of the worst cases. It never fails to cure, hopeless as the case may seem.

Would you safely shield your loved ones from the fatal grip of this curse of mankind—Bright's Disease? Then use Dodd's Kidney Pills, the only cure on earth for this disease.
