FOUL PLAY.

By Charles Reade.

CHAPTER XV.

'What is that?' cried Wardlaw senior;
the 'Proserpine?' Show him in at once.'

Now, this caused Arthur Wardlaw considerable anxiety; for obvious reasons he did not want his father and this sailor to exchange a word together. However, that was inevitable now; the door opened, and the bronzed face and sturdy figure of Wylie, clad in a rough pea jacket, came slouching in.

Arthur went hastily to meet him, and gave him an expressive look of warning, even while he welcomed him in cordial accents.

'Glad to see you safe home,' said Wardlaw senior.

'Thank ye, gov'nor,' said Wylie. 'Had a squeeze for it this time.'

'Where is your ship?'

Wylie shook his head sorrowfully.
'Bottom of the Pacific.'

'Good Heavens! What is she lost?'

'That she is, sir; foundered at sea, twelve hundred miles from the Horn, and more.'

'And the freight—the gold?' put in Arthur, with well-feigned anxiety.

'Not an ounce saved,' said Wylie, disconsolately. 'A hundred and sixty thousand pounds gone to the bottom.'

'Good Heavens!'

'Ye see, sir,' said Wylie, 'the ship encountered one gale after another, and labored a good deal, first and last; and we all say her seams must have opened; for we never could find the leak that sunk her,
and he cast a meaning glance at Arthur Wardlaw.'

'No matter how it happened,' said the old merchant; 'ere we insured to the full!'
that is the first question.'

'To the last shilling.'

'Well done, Arthur.'

'But still it is most unlucky. Some weeks must elapse before the insurances can be realized and a portion of the gold was paid for in bills at short date.'

'The rest in cash?'

'Cash and merchandise.'

'Then there is the proper margin. Draw on my private account at the Bank of England.'

These few simple words showed the struggling young merchant a way out of all his difficulties.

His heart leaped so he dare not reply, lest he should excite the old gentleman's suspicions.

But ere he could well draw his breath for joy, came a freer.

'Mr. Burtenshaw, sir.'

'Bid him wait,' said Arthur, aloud, and cast a look of great anxiety on Penfold, which the poor old man, with all his simplicity, comprehended well enough.

'Burtenshaw, from Morland's. What does he want of us?' said Wardlaw senior, knitting his brows.

Arthur turned cold all over.

'Perhaps to ask me not to draw out my balance. It is less than usual; but they are run upon; and, as you are good enough to let me draw on you—by-the-by, perhaps you will sign a check before you go to the station.'

'How much do you want?'

'I really don't know, till I have consulted Penfold. The gold was a large and advantageous purchase, sir.'

'No doubt; no doubt. I'll give you my signature, and you can fill in the amount.'

He drew a check in favor of Arthur Wardlaw, signed it, and left him to fill in the figures.

He then looked at his watch, and remarked they would barely have time to get to the station.

'Good Heavens!' cried Arthur; 'and I can't go. I must learn the particulars of the loss of the "Proserpine," and prepare the statement at once for the underwriters.'

'Well, never mind. I can go.'

'But what will she think of me! I ought to be the first to welcome her.'

'I'll make your excuses.'

'No, no; say nothing. After all, it was you who received the telegram; so you naturally must hear; but you will bring her here, father? You won't whisk my darling down to Elm trees, till you have blest me with the sight of her?'

'I will not be so cruel, fond lover,' said old Wardlaw, laughing, and took up his hat and gloves to go.

Arthur went to the door with him in great anxiety, lest he should question Burtenshaw; but peering into the outer office, he observed Burtenshaw was not there.

Michael had caught his employer's anxious look, and conveyed the banker into the small room where the short-hand writer was at work. But Burtenshaw was one of a struggling firm; to him every minute was an hour. He had sat, fuming with impatience, so long as he heard talking in the inner office; and the moment it ceased, he took the liberty of coming in. He opened the side door just as Wardlaw senior was passing through the centre door.

Instantly Wardlaw junior whipped before him, to hide his figure from his retreating father.

Wylie, who all this time had been sitting silent, looking from one to the other, and quietly puzzling out the game as well as he could, observed this movement, and then he grinned.

As for Arthur Wardlaw, he saw his father safe out, and then gave a sigh of relief, and walking to his office table sat down and began to fill in the check.

Burtenshaw drew near and said:
