BEYOND THE SUBURBS

AN IDYL OF THE SUBURBS

BY A. CONAN DOYLE

CONTINUED.

"Aren't you tired?" she asked, glancing over her shoulder and turning toward him a little pink ear, fluffy golden curls, and one blue eye twinkling from the very corner of its lid.

"Not a bit. I am just getting my swing."

"Isn't it wonderful to be so strong? You always remind me of a steam engine."

"Why a steam engine?"

"Well, because it is so powerful and reliable and unflinching. Well, I don't mean that last, you know, but—but you know what I mean. What is the matter with you?"

"Why?"

"Because you have something on your mind. You have not laughed once." He broke into a growling laugh. "I am quite jolly," said he.

"Oh, no, you are not. And why did you write me such a dreadfully stiff letter?"

"There, now," he cried, "I was sure it was stiff. I said it was absurdly stiff."

"Then why write it?"

"It wasn't my own composition."

"Whose then? Your aunt's?"

"Oh, no. It was a person of the name of Slatery."

"Goodness! Who is he?"

"I know it would come out. I felt that it would. You've heard of Slatery, the author?"

"He is wonderful at expressing himself. He wrote a book called 'The Secret Solved; or, Letter Writing Made Easy.' It gives you models of all sorts of letters."

Ida burst out laughing. "So you actually copied one?"

"It was to invite a young lady to a picnic, but I set to work and soon got it changed so that it would do very well. Slatery seems never to have asked any one to ride a tandem. But when I had written it, it seemed so dreadfully stiff that I had to put a little beginning and end of my own, which seemed to brighten it up a good deal."

"I thought there was something funny about the beginning and end."

"Did you? Fancy your noticing the difference in style. How quick you are! I am very slow at things like that. I ought to have been a woodman or gamekeeper or something. I was made on these lines, but I have found something new."

"What is that, then?"

"Ranching. I have a chum in Texas, and he says it is a rare life. I am to buy a share in his business. It is all in the open air—shooting and riding and sport. Would it—it would it inconvenience you much, Ida, to come out there with me?"

Ida nearly fell off her perch in her amazement. The only words of which she could think were, "My goodness me!"

"If it would not upset your plans or change your arrangements in any way," he said slowly and let go of the steering handle, so that the great machine crawled aimlessly about from one side of the road to the other. "I know very well that I am not clever or anything of that sort, but still I would do all I can to make you very happy. Don't you think that in time you might come to like me a little?"

Ida gave a cry of fright. "I won't like you if you run me against a brick wall," said she as the machine rasped up against the curb. "Do attend to the steering."

"Yes, I will. But tell me, Ida, whether you will come with me."

"Oh, I don't know. It's too absurd! How can we talk about such things when I cannot see you? I speak to the map of my neck, and then I have to twist my head round to answer you."

"I know. That was why I put 'You in front' upon my letter. I thought that it would make it easier. But if you would prefer it I will stop the machine, and then you can sit round and talk about it."

"Good gracious!" cried Ida. "Fancy our sitting face to face on a motionless tricycle in the middle of the road and all the people looking out of their windows at us!"

"It would look rather funny, wouldn't it? Well, then suppose that we both get off and push the tandem along in front of us."

"Oh, no, this is better than that."

"Of I could carry the thing."

Ida burst out laughing. "That would be more absurd still."

"Then we will go quietly, and I will look out for the steering. I won't talk about it at all if you would rather not. But I really do love you very much, and you would make me happy if you came to Texas with me, and I think that perhaps after a time I could make you happy too."

"But your aunt?"

"Oh, she is really like it very much. I can understand that your father might not like to lose you. I'm sure I wouldn't either if I were he. But, after all, America is not very far off nowadays, and it is not so very wild. We would take a grand plan, and—and a copy of Browning. And Denver and his wife would come over to see us. We should be quite a family party. It would be jolly."

"Oh, do attend to your steering," said she, smiling at him, "and don't say any more about this today. Please don't!"

"When shall I know, then?"

"Oh, tonight, tomorrow—I don't know. I must ask Clara. Talk about something else."

And they did talk about something else, but her left hand was still inclosed in his, and he knew, without asking again, that all was well.

CHAPTER VIII. SHADOWS BEFORE.

Mrs. Westmacott's great meeting for the enfranchisement of woman had passed over, and it had been a triumphant success. All the maids and matrons of the southern suburbs had rallied at her summons; there was an influential platform, with Dr. Balhazar Walker in the chair, and Admiral Hay Denver among his more prominent supporters. One bright male had come in from the outside darkness, and had served the further end of the hall, but he had been called to order by the chair, petrified by indignant glances from the enfranchisement ladies, and escorted to the door by Charles Westmacott. Every resolution was passed, and the meeting was over, and still the doctor, followed by a large number of leading statesmen, and the meeting broke up with the conviction that a shrewd blow had been struck for the cause of woman.

But there was one woman at least to whom the meeting and all that was connected with it had brought anything but pleasure. Clara Walker watched with a heavy heart the friendship and close intimacy which had sprung up between her father and the woman. From week to week it had increased until no day ever passed without their being together. The coming meeting had been the excuse for these continual interviews, but now for would refer every point which rose to the judgment of his neighbor. He would talk, too, to his two daughters of the strength of character, her decisive mind, and of the necessity of their cultivating her acquaintance with the following her acquaintance until at last it had become his most common topic of conversation.

Don't Start a Cold.

If you do you will nine times in ten, have a fever to starve.

A cold is a shock received by the myriad nerves that line the surface of a human body. This shock is transmitted to the nerve centres, and then back to the mucous membranes, forcing a great amount of blood to those membranes, creating a more or less severe irritation, and consequent rise in the temperature, followed by chills. Excess of food in the stomach still more increases the temperature, and, worst of all, helps clog secretions or natural outlets of the body. It is high time we broke away from an old notion which, like some others, has done more harm than good. For example, in years past many poor fever sufferers, burning and thirsting, and their faces hurried to an untimely grave because not allowed cooling drinks or a bit of ice by the old time treatment for fevers as foolish as the usage for colds. At last one cunning delirious patient got to a pump of cold water and drank his fill; determined not to leave till the well ran dry, he slackened the fever, recovered, and doctors learned a lesson. Experimenting with a severe cold a dangerous custom, as most persons try one remedy only until some friend suggests another "sure cure," as Mark Twain so humorously describes. When slight ailments are followed by severe ones, the membranes wear out of a skin exposure or chill from wet, act promptly; a delay is dangerous. With children it may mean croup and strangulation with all its attendant horrors, or perhaps pneumonia. If neglected, nothing can prevent the sneezing, red nose, and we-be-gone look of a person with a cold. Scores of mothers would as soon go to bed without mending the house, as without that old-fashioned remedy, Johnson's Anodyne Liniment, near at hand for croupy children. Used with a mild laxative, as described in a pamphlet which I, S. Johnson and Co., Boston, Mass., will send free to anyone, Johnson's Liniment will cure a cold for adults quicker than any known remedy. A mild nutritious diet, a gentle physic to open the secretions, and a bottle of that old Anodyne from your neighbor will conquer any cold. Johnson's Anodyne Liniment was originated by an old family physician more than seventy years ago.

Each number of McCLURE'S MAGAZINE contains two illustrated interviews with famous people. Jules Verne, Frances Hodgson Burnett, T. S. Arthur, the famous French Balloonist, Archdeacon Farrer, Thomas A. Edison, F. Hopkinson Smith, H. H. Boyesen, Alphonse Daudet, Camille Flammarion, Edward Everett Hale, Professor Graham Bell and many others, have furnished material for especially prepared interviews, which will appear fully illustrated in this magazine.

HENRY M. STANLEY will contribute, especially for young readers, a story of AFRICAN ADVENTURE.

NATURAL HISTORY AND ADVENTURE.—There will be several articles written by Raymond B. Blathway, who has been called by Mr. W. T. Stead the best interviewer in England, from material furnished him by Carl Hagenback, of Hamburg, the great animal importer and trainer. These articles deal with the Capture of Wild Beasts, the Training of Wild Beasts, the Transportation of Wild Beasts, the Adventures and Escapes of Carl Hagenback. The series will be illustrated by an English artist of great skill in drawing animals.

JOHN BURROUGHS, C. F. HOLDER, DR. C. C. ABBOTT and other writers anxious for their work in this field, will contribute to the Magazine.

Of interest to both Young and Old will be PROF. R. L. GARNER'S AFRICAN EXPEDITION TO THE GORILLAS. Arrangements have been made, in connection with a leading English review, to publish Professor Garner's letters descriptive of his present expedition to Africa. Professor Garner is noted the world over for his curious and interesting investigations he is making in the speech of monkeys. He sailed for Africa last September for the purpose of further pursuing his studies in the native haunts of the gorilla. The illustrations of these articles will be from photographs taken by Prof. Garner in Africa.

McCLURE'S MAGAZINE also contains most interesting articles under the head: "The Edge of the Future," "Newest Knowledge," "Knowledge of Immediate Value," "The Present Hour," "Stranger than Fiction," etc.

WATERFUL PLEASING RELIEF AFTER MANY DAYS.

How a Queens County Man Found Permanent Healing.

His Own Experience Tells Fully and Freely some Truths which all Readers of this Paper Should Know.

Here and there, in almost every town of our province, are "chronic" cases over which doctors disagree; cases that become worse year after year. It is to reach such the gentleman to whom these lines refer, and whose portrait is here given, has written the story of his case.

Mr. Branscomb's home is in Chipman, Queens Co., N. B. It was there that a representative of the Groder company called upon him, Sept 1st of the present year. His greeting was most cordial. He gladly acknowledged his thanks giving expression to the following statement:

"It is five years since I first became afflicted with a form of indigestion. Last winter it became more severe, developing into chronic diarrhoea. I cannot tell you how much I suffered for SIX LONG WEEKS. It seemed as though relief could not be found. You will remember how I told you of my condition and asked your advice about taking a bottle of GRODER'S SYRUP. You told me that the medicine was a laxative and might not meet my needs. I delayed by buying for a few hours until I began to hope that it would help me. Even my clothes seemed a burden because of bloating of stomach. It was with difficulty that I kept about sufficiently to attend to my business.

But I am a well man now from the use of your remedy. In three days after I bought GRODER'S SYRUP the terrible pain and distress across my stomach were removed. My bowels rapidly assumed a natural, healthy condition. Now I can eat and drink as well as I ever could. I have gained constantly in flesh since March last. I am perfectly cured.

It seems a duty for me to state my case fully, that others who suffer as I did may know where to find a cure."

Truly yours,

E. A. BRANSCOMB.
