

MR. AND MRS. ROGER SOLOMAN

Double Ring Ceremony Solemnized At Sturgeon

Lighted candles adorned the altar of St. Paul's Church, Sturgeon for the recent marriage of Mary Sheila, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Graham, Murray Harbour North and Roger Allan Soloman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Soloman Sr. of Souris.

Rev. F. Mullally performed the double ring ceremony and celebrated the Nuptial mass. He was assisted by altar boys George Griffin and Paul Jameison.

Mrs. Dan Condon, organist, assisted by Mrs. Alex Arsenault and Genevieve Soloman sang "Oh What Could My Jesus Do More" at the offertory.

The bride given in marriage by her father, chose a floor length gown of white velvet. The fitted bodice featured a scalloped neckline and long sleeves.

The bride was attended by her sisters, Elaine as maid of honor and Dianne as bridesmaid, the groom's sister, Anne, as junior-bridesmaid and a little friend, Rhonda Lou MacKenzie as flower girl.

The bride wore a drop pearl necklace and earrings. The groom's mother chose a royal blue dress of brocade velvet with a matching hat and a mink jacket.

The groom was attended by his brother, Walter Soloman, Jr. as best man and ushers. Joe Pierce and Larry Graham escorted guests to pews marked by sprigs of holly and white satin bows.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the Lower Montague Community Hall where the bride's table was centered with a three tier wedding cake topped by a miniature bride and groom.

The groom was attended by his brother, Walter Soloman, Jr. as best man and ushers. Joe Pierce and Larry Graham escorted guests to pews marked by sprigs of holly and white satin bows.

ELLEN'S DIARY

The Bad Weather Hurried Return Of The Students

"There's little sign of a storm this morning, Ellen," James ofered at breakfast. "You can, I would say, safely set on with your wash." And a drying wind came down presently over the fields to us here in the valley, and, while there was a light cloud-cover, the day favored the chore.

We could appreciate from the wistful expression which had appeared for a moment in her eyes that the daughter of the house across the lane was somewhat disappointed Sunday, when because of the adverse weather forecast - and apparently weathering - it hurried her own, and other students' return to the mainland, some hours before the time they had set. "I did hope to have a sleighride along the fields. But, oh well..." she smiled.

"There'll be sleigh-rides before your winter is over," James promised. "It's a long road you have to go. And" he added, "it is not, I would say, the pleasant thing to be caught out motoring in a snowstorm. And sometimes an hour's earlier start-yes, and often a few minutes', will make all the difference between a comfortable, and an uneasy trip. Come snowfall with a rising wind, and soon quite a mean storm can develop!"

Among our weekend visitors at Alderlea, was a little dark-haired lady, a Newfoundland by birth, a Prince Edward Islander by marriage, and a Hallonian by adoption.

And what of today? We must spread our washed pieces to the morning... and make and bake our loaves of bread...

Forgatherings of farmers of the name to the woodlands, these afternoons see. The fuel is being harvested, and as an incidental, the sticks for lumber, required about the farms...

A lightly overcast day. And in its wake, neither moon nor stars, but the hushed dim of a mild winter-night.

Until tomorrow... Diary-Goodnight.....

MARY HAWORTH

No Interest In Husband Only In Fault-Finding

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: George and I have been married a little over a year. He is 43 and I am 31.

I had a previous marriage of short duration, some years ago. George too was married before, for 15 years and has two children, now with their mother.

I hesitated about marrying him, not sure that I loved him. But his persistence and my insecurity and lack of purpose in life caused me to consent.

We courted two years before marrying, and had an affair during that time. He has helped me in many ways, especially in building up my self-esteem and ability to get along with people.

I was hospitalized during my 20th year with an emotional breakdown. I am grateful for all he has done, and I feel affection for him, but he doesn't hold my interest either mentally or sexually.

He says I concentrate on fault-finding, which is true: I am very critical of myself and others.

I don't boost his ego much, and I guess I should. But I am so bogged down by my negative thinking that I can't seem to see him in an exciting or positive light.

I know he has many qualities; he is so patient with me, tolerates my carping, takes his initiative in making up, etc. But after a year of marriage, much of which we've spent in battling, we are still battling.

Will I ever be able to make our marriage work? I feel badly about hurting him, but I just do not know what to do.

Perhaps I would be happier single, or with someone else. But at my age I am beginning to wonder if I could be happy with anyone.

Several times after a big fight I make up my mind to leave, permanently. I start mentally rehearsing plans for the future: new job, where to live, etc. Then he comes in, affectionately, and talks me into reconciling.

After that we are happy and content for several days. Then pow! another big fight erupts, lasting some times a week. Lately they are getting longer and closer together.

Can you please help me? I do not know how to reach a conclusion in the vacuum of myself. E. E.

DEAR E. E.: Your battling with George may be symptomatic of a compulsive resistance to your part to the possibility of experiencing genuine, and growing, psychological closeness to him.

The phenomenon of loving and being loved, truly, in the person-to-person form of a good marriage, is a very defenceless sort of venture in getting to know, and be known by, the other.

It is a very difficult, very unsettling relationship for a neurotic individual to undertake, or even to consider from a near distance, as your initial hesitancy about marrying George aptly illustrates.

Why? Well, the pervasive overall reason - which each anxious neurotic would outline differently, in trying to explain his feelings, attitudes, actions and reactions - is: because the near
