Stiffer Competition Faced By Canadian Apple Exporters

By REFORD MacDOUGALL

MONTREAL (CP) — Exporters of Canadian apples now face competitors abroad who are producing apples in "soaring quantities," says Yves Bolduc, general manager of Quebec Apple Distributors Incorporated.

Mr. Bolduc, recently returned from studying apple markets in Europe, said in an interview that Canadian apples no longer have much chance in Italy, France or West Germany.

Only in Britain and Scandinavia were there still possibilities for apple exporters and even there local growers were producing apples in large quantities.

Mr. Bolduc, who at 37 has been in the apple business for 13 years, said Europe has begun to grow apples in a big way. West Germany, for example, produced 36,000,000 bushels in 1939 while last year its output was 83,000,000.

European advantages were lower labor costs and the ability to deliver in two days where it took Canadian exporters six or seven days.

WARNS SUPPLIERS

Mr. Bolduc emphasized the importance of supplying a good product regularly. "We stand a good chance of losing out if we don't keep this in mind," he said.

He described how Quebec and Ontario had made great strides in exporting to Britain, "while five years ago we were hardly in the business."

Federal government figures show that in 1961-62, Quebec exported 98,000 bushels of apples to the U.K. compared with 236,000 in 1962-63. Corresponding figures for Ontario were 99,000 compared with 111,000.

"To keep exporting," Mr. Bolduc said, "we must make changes in the industry as it now exists.

"Most important, we must centralize packaging and distribution. By so doing, we will cut costs and will be able to certify good products and thus put an end to certain distributors selling lousy apples, a practice that can give our apples a bad name.

COULD CO-OPERATE

"With increased centralization, too, we could pool resources and thereby increase publicity for Canadian apples."

Mr. Bolduc also suggested improved packaging methods. "It's the package that often causes the housewife to buy a product and we must remember that."

Apple-producing areas should produce what they can grow best, he said. Quebec should concentrate on the Macintosh apple and Ontario on the Macintosh and the Delicious.

"There's definitely a market for these apples," Mr. Bolduc said, "for the Europeans as yet have not produced them in the same quality or quantity as we have.

"If we do some of these things," he said, we might combat rising labor and production costs, which are pricing us out of export markets.

"Finally, we would also be wise to cultivate the Canadian market more intensively."

The bidding:

The bidding:

Opening lead—queen of clubs.

The most aggravating part of bridge is that it's so easy to make a mistake. You plug along, hand after hand, trying hard to avoid error, and then, all of a sudden, you goof and the roof comes tumbling down. Most of the time the mistake you made could easily have been avoided, but something went wrong with the think machinery and the engine somehow conked out.

For example, look at this hand where South played in four hearts and West led the queen of clubs. Declarer took the club with the ace and played a low heart. West won with the ace and returned the jack of clubs, covered by the king and ruffed by East. Declarer later lost a diamond and a club and went down one as a result.

Of course, South should have made the hand. He stipped at trick one. It may not have seemed important at the time whether he won the opening lead in dummy with the king or in his own hand with the ace, but later events proved that it would have been easier to take the first trick in dummy.

If South had done this he would have made the contract. He would lead a heart at trick two and get the club return just the same, but the outcome would have been vastly different. If East ruffed, South would naturally follow low, while if East discarded, South would win with the ace. In either case, he would lose only three tricks—a heart, a diamond and a club.

Considering that West had bid two clubs, South should have made allowance for the possibility that he had overcalled with a six-card suit, and should have protected against that danger by playing the king from dummy.

These plays you run into that appear to make no difference should always be viewed with suspicion. If you ignore them, or treat them with disrespect, they have a way of coming back to haunt you—especially if they affect your bank account.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:
A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.
