Last Word Not Yet Uttered In Party Affiliation Issue

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP) — The last word remains to be said in the current parliamentary session about the question of listing the party affiliations of candidates on federal election ballots.

A proposal that the Commons elections committee recommend the addition of party affiliations to the ballot was defeated by a narrow margin in the committee Tuesday.

But advocates of the change have indicated they do not regard the action as final, either for the committee or the Commons itself.

The issue produced a marked split among Liberals on the committee. Most of the newer Liberal MPs clashed with old-guard opponents of such a change.

The young members were supported by New Democratic and Social Credit MPs in attempting to write a recommendation favoring the change. When it came down to a vote, they lost to a combination of Progressive Conservatives and old-guard Liberals. It was 11 to 10.

Listing of party affiliations on the ballot was a new plank in the Liberal platform for the 1963 election campaign. It had been backed for a longer period by the New Democrats.

The young Liberals, led in the elections committee by Maurice J. Moreau (York-Scarborough), took their stand partly on the party's platform which they regard as a promise to the voter.

But they also argued that in urban areas, where candidates must appeal to many more voters than in rural areas, an overwhelming number of voters cast their ballots on the basis of the candidate's party.

They say candidates just aren't able to make the personal impact on the large electorate that rural candidates make on their fewer constituents. The city voter moves more often to a different constituency than the rural voter who often resides a lifetime in the same riding.

The young Liberals and their backers in other parties—Frank Howard (Skeena) and Douglas Fisher (Port Arthur) of the New Democratic Party and Bert Leboe (SC—Cariboo)—also argued that it will greatly help the voter in marking his ballot to have party affiliations listed.

And it would cut what they regard as the enormous advertising cost to candidates of identifying the candidate's name with his political party in poster campaigns, broadcasting and newspaper ads.

Heath Macquarrie (PC—Queens) held out for the traditional view that a candidate is running in an election as an individual committed to represent all voters in his riding, and that it is secondary that he belongs to one of the political parties.

U.K. Defence Expert Sees Crisis Shaping For NATO

TORONTO (CP)—The North Atlantic Treaty Organization is engaged in a crucial policy debate that could sharply alter or destroy the alliance in little more than five years, says British defence expert, Alastair Buchan.

Mr. Buchan, director of the Institute for Strategic Studies in London, predicted in an interview here that "a great crisis is coming" in the 15 - nation alliance when the treaty comes up for renewal in 1969.

"The future of NATO depends on how much headway the views of France make with other European nations," he said. "If President de Gaulle converts the Europeans to his sort of concept of the alliance, then you won't see American forces in Europe by the end of this decade."

Views similar to the de Gaulle idea for a loose alliance lacking strong central control are held by U.S. presidential hopeful Barry Goldwater, Mr. Buchan said, and the Arizona Republican Senator's political future could also have a bearing on NATO's development.

Mr. Buchan, here to address the Canadian Institute of International Affairs on U.S.-European strategic relations, is a son of the late Lord Tweedsmuir (novelist John Buchan), governor - general of Canada from 1935 to 1940.

IN CANADIAN ARMY

He served in the Canadian army during the Second World War, taking part in the Dieppe raid of 1942 and the Normandy campaign. He later was on the staff of The Economist and The Observer of London, including terms as Washington correspondent and defence writer.

Mr. Buchan said NATO is suffering from "the failures of its own idea of an Atlantic relationship based upon the twin pillars of the United States and a united Europe."

He said he doubts whether European economic co-operation will develop into full political union and in any case there is no guarantee a unified western Europe would see eye-to-eye with the United States on defence strategy.

Montague UC Men's Ass'n Plans Project

MONTAGUE — Neil Matheson, provincial and farm editor of The Guardian and Patriot was guest speaker at the opening meeting of Trinity United Church Men's Association, Montague, earlier this week.

Mr. Matheson took as his topic several of the folk lore tales which he came in contact with during the past year in his research for material for his column.

The meeting started with a hot beef dinner served by the ladies of the church. A brisk sing-song was led by Jack Annear.

The new president for the 1963-64 season, Angus Jones, welcomed the members and introduced the guests.

During the business part of the meeting he asked for a list of projects for the consideration of the association one in which could be selected as the one for this season. Ed Downe suggested the renovation by the association members of the basement for Sunday school space. This project was supported by Lorne Wigginton and was well received by the remainder of the group.

Dr. A.E. Ings suggested that the meetings follow the practice of opening with a religious presentation such as the reading of a portion of scripture and a prayer, the service to be conducted by the members.

A group of the members is to meet at the church Tuesday to attend the Men's association dinner at Morell.
