ELLEN'S DIARY

Fresh Vegetables Grace Farm Meal-Time Menus

"This is always a nice month — one of my favorites" — a farm wife commented the other day when we chatted. "It is, we may say, the first of the ripening months, and full of surprises. The garden rewards us with beans and peas, with first cucumbers and tomatoes. We have new potatoes and we can find a sizable turnip or carrot and a young cabbage headed. And the apples in the orchard are turning."

"Well, it's a pretty month," we said. "The sky is a placid blue. The fields lie dreaming in the sunshine. The harvest shades deepen. Withal a little sad it is, because in it the vacation-time ebbs. Before long the children will be coming to count down last days."

"But they won't mind — not actually. In fact I think they are rather glad to get back to the classrooms again. Despite their sighs, I believe they enjoy the routine. And there's always the newness, the anticipation of the new term and work."

This August week the children at Alderlea will remember happily this Old Home Week which for them, has now drawn to a close. Theirs were its days: The mornings called them in to its excitements early, the evenings returned them home weary but content to their beds. Alex and Peter, that is. In recent years, Mack moves in, couch and covers and house-keeping equipment, and there he maintains a home away from home for the duration, close by this or that chosen one of the herd. Sometimes one or another of the family, or it may be some lady comes to keep him company there.

Now he will be back home to James McAleer, cousin of the groom, was best man and the ushers were Paddy Murphy, brother of the bride, Steven Walsh, brother-in-law of the groom, and Melvin Larkin, brother-in-law of the groom.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Murphy chose a flowered sheath dress with matching coat, and bejee accessories. The groom's mother wore an orchid sheath dress with matching stole, and black accessories.

A reception for 130 guests was held at the Basilica Recreation Centre where the bride's table was centered with a three-tiered wedding cake topped with a miniature bride and groom. Merrill McAlduff was master of ceremonies. The toast to the bride was proposed by James McAleer, and responded to by the groom. The guest book was circulated by Rosemary McLeod, cousin of the bride.

Out-of-province guests attending the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Harold Bracken, and Louis MacMillan, Montreal, P.Q.; Mr. and Mrs. Harold Lowe, and family, Dartmouth, N.S.; and Louis Reid, Scarborough, Ontario. The newlyweds will reside in Windsor, Ontario, where the groom is employed by Chrysler of Canada Ltd.

Dear Mary Haworth: I am getting increasingly weary and angry with bachelors' arguments in favor of a passing affair. They use the technique of patronizing surprise (real or fake). "Don't tell me you are a stuffy old maid at heart! Surely you're not that kind of a girl!"

They use the line that something must be wrong with you either frigidity, or a mass of neurotic inhibitions, which you surely will want to start overcoming, if you have the will power to draw the line against surrender.

Occasionally the implication is that you'll be a lousy wife if you ever marry, using sex as a weapon, selfishly. Some embittered bachelors have charged that I am still a virgin only because I'm not that attractive to men — a jibing effort to challenge one in telling one's life history, I think.

I marvel at the vanity of them there must be something wrong man who fancies, or alleges, that with the girl who won't yield to him!

I don't sidestep casual sex because I think it's a sin. I simply prefer to wait for a relationship of deep mutual love and respect as the basis for sex. I would like my sex life to begin on the honeymoon. Where are the men who have this philosophy? E.S.

Dear E.S.: I would suppose that the majority of psychologically competent men who subscribe to the essentially human (as versus any cat) philosophy of sex which you enunciate, are already married or engaged to be married to attractive, intelligent, congenial girls who share (and live by) their belief that premarital chastity, especially for girls, is infinitely preferable to premarital promiscuity.

MR. AND MRS. ALBERT LARSEN
Wedding Vows Pledged
At Two Ring Ceremony

Baskets of mixed summer flowers decorated Belfast Presbyterian Church on July 16 at six p.m. when Barbara Marie, youngest daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Cantelo, Pinetree, was united in marriage with Albert Ernest, son of Mr. and Mrs. Aage Larsen, Eldon.

The bride, given in marriage by Albert Phillips, wore a floor length gown of nylon organza over taffeta with fitted lace bodice, scoop neckline and lace panel inset in a controlled net lined skirt. The gown also featured bow trim at waistline and full length sleeves coming to points over the hands. She carried a cascade bouquet of red sweetheart roses. Her shoulder length veil of tulle illusion was held in place by a velvet fabric gardenia. Her only jewelry was a cultured pearl necklace, a gift of the groom.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at Keppoch Beach Hotel. The bride's table was centered with a three-tiered wedding cake topped with a miniature bride and groom. Rev. Nicholson asked the blessing.

The groom's mother, Mrs. Larsen, wore a brown floral silk print dress with white accessories and a corsage of yellow mums.

Joanne Lord, circulated the guest book.

Marriage vows were pledged at St. Paul's Church, Summerside, when Mary Pauline Underhill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Clayton Underhill, Summerside, became the bride of James Bruce Johnston, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Bruce Johnston, also of Summerside.

Rev. Pierre Arsenault performed the double ring ceremony and said the nuptial mass. Thomas Perry was organist and accompanied Mrs. Gertrude Cahill who sang, "Prayer for a Perfect Life" and "O Sacred Heart."

The altar was decorated with baskets of pink and white flowers to carry out the bridal party.
