OUT OUR WAY

By J. R. Williams

No one cares when selfish people get in trouble, because no one loves those who are selfish. Love and selfishness are like oil and water - they never mix. It was the first time in all his life that Buster Bear had been so nearly helpless. Some of those who always had got out of his way in a hurry whenever he appeared, now hardly stepped aside. They knew he couldn't catch them. They knew he wouldn't even try. This hurt his pride. Always he had liked to feel that he was King of the Green Forest. He had liked to see people afraid of him. There are folks like that, you know. So Buster with a sore foot and an empty stomach which, because of that sore foot, he couldn't fill, was left to himself. And no one said that they were even sorry. That was because no one cared.
