sensual pleasure. The people are heavily taxed, and get very little for their taxes. The Republicans are quick-sighted and eloquent, and take good care to attribute to Monarchy nearly the whole of the evils with which the State is afflicted.

A Congress is proposed, the business of which will be to settle matters between the Pope and the Italian people. There are various rumors afloat concerning this Congress of nations. It is said that the Pope will not permit his claims to the sovereignty of his territory in Italy to be questioned by any earthly tribunal. It is said too that all the powers which signed the Treaty of 1815 have accepted the invitation to take part in the proposed Conference, to take into consideration the political condition of the States of the Church. This business of nation-making and mending is pretty sure sooner or later to end unsatisfactorily to all parties. The policy of non-intervention appears to us to be the only true one. If the Italians were left to settle their own affairs, the settlement, whenever one was arrived at, would be much more likely to prove permanent than any arrangement which outsiders, however able and disinterested, may be able to patch up. The business of this Conference, if it ever meet, which is very doubtful, will be very difficult and very delicate; and we greatly fear that the combined wisdom and moderation of Europe will scarcely bring it to a satisfactory conclusion. If, as has been said, the Pope's subjects are perfectly satisfied with his rule, we don't see that any power on earth has the least right to interfere between them and the sovereign of their choice. If, on the other hand, they dislike the Pontifical sway, and are determined to have rulers of their own choice, let them effect the change in their own way. Any meddling by either Garibaldians or Frenchmen is likely to do more harm than good. The Romans are surely the best judges of what is good for themselves. If foreign nations interfere at all, it should be to prevent interference.

The Imperial Parliament was opened by royal commission on Tuesday, the 19th ult. We regret that we have not space to give our readers the Speech from the Throne.

The account of the execution of the three Fenians guilty of the outrage at Manchester, and of the proceedings consequent thereupon, fill nearly the whole of the news columns of the English newspapers. The names of the three unfortunate men were Allen, Gould and Larkin. They displayed no unseemly bravado on the scaffold. Their demeanor—if the account read by us can be relied on—was solemn, and befitting Christian men who knew that in a few moments they were to stand in the presence of the Great Judge. There were no frantic protestations of innocence; no mad strugglings with the executioner. They all prayed fervently, and though pallid and trembling, stood upon the fatal platform as calm and self-possessed as could be expected of men in their awful situation. The death penalty is a terrible thing. Nothing but the most imminent danger to the State can justify men in resorting to it.

OBITUARY.

It is with feelings of sincere sorrow that we announce to our readers the death of the Hon. EDWARD WHELAN, Queen's Printer, and Editor of the Examiner. This sad event took place on Tuesday the 10th inst., at twelve o'clock, noon. It was here altogether unexpected. We had heard from time to time that Mr. WHELAN was ailing, but we had no idea that he was dangerously ill. The disease of which he died was dropsy. Though Mr. WHELAN's public career has been a long and a successful one, he died a comparatively young man, being but forty-three years of age. He was for twenty years continuously, a member of the House of Assembly. Of that House he was long the pride and the ornament. He was a man of fine intellect, of enlarged ideas, and of truly liberal principles. A pleasing and a powerful speaker, and a sparkling and a graceful writer, he contributed largely to the success of any cause which he espoused. His brilliant talents both as a legislator and as a journalist, were unweariedly exerted in procuring for the people of this Island, Responsible Government, Universal Suffrage, Free Education, and Free Lands. Any cause which had for its aim either the material or the intellectual advancement of the people, found in him an eloquent and an efficient advocate. Many of the best laws to be found on our Island Statute Book are inseparably connected with the name of EDWARD WHELAN.

Without extensive possessions or powerful family influence, and though depending solely on the good will of the people for political advancement, Mr. WHELAN was no demagogue. He never from merely personal considerations scrupled to stem the tide of popular opinion, when he found the current setting in what he considered the wrong direction. He valued the people's interests much more highly than he did their approbation. Mr. WHELAN's political career has been a singularly consistent one, and his public services merit the lasting gratitude of the people of this Island.

Those who were privileged to know Mr. WHELAN in private, have to deplore the loss of a singularly pleasant companion, and a generous warm-hearted friend. His fascinating conversation and genial sympathetic nature endeared him to nearly every one whom he met in the intercourse of social life. Very few even of his most bitter political opponents could long dislike a man of his kindly placable nature and pleasant manners. It is very seldom that a man who had taken so active and so prominent a part in the political contests of his day has left so few enemies behind him.

☞ THE ice in our harbor is now well made, and horses have been crossing on it since Sunday last. It is said to be one foot in thickness in some places.

☞ THE Steamer Princess of Wales towed several vessels out of the port of Charlottetown on Tuesday last.

☞ WE are glad to learn that there are to be a number of vessels built here during the winter, as we know there are many men in want of employment.

☞ WE have received the P. E. Island Calendar for 1868, issued from the Patriot office. It is very neatly printed, and contains as usual, a large amount of valuable information. It is on sale at our Book Store.

THE ISLAND MINSTREL: a collection of some of the Poetical Writings of JOHN LEPAGE, formerly third Master of the Central Academy, Vol. II., Charlottetown, P. E. I., 1867.

The above is the title of the second volume of the "Island Minstrel." The printing and binding, which were done by Mr. Wm. Bremner, are very neatly executed. Many of the pieces in this volume have appeared before, but there are a large number of new pieces also. It will be found a very interesting little book, and as the author says himself, "if not so fine as some of the imported articles in the Rhyming department, may nevertheless be considered passable, as a genuine specimen of Island production. He

"Launches his unpretending rhymes,
Upon the current of the times,
Where Fortune's Winds capricious play,
And hopes are foundered every day.
