Making Quince Preserves.

The excuse for this richest of all preserves is its very richness, its pungent, delicious flavor—so unlike any other fruit that there seems no kinship between them. We do not want it often—we should tire of it—and we do not want much of it, so it is well in any but large families to use pint jars for it. Quince is better than any other preserves in sweet omelets, gives a fine additional touch of flavor to mince meat, is effective in tutti frutti and nesselrode pudding and in a diaret cup. The flavor is finer, mellow and the pieces of fruit softer the second year after preserving it.

In preserving first wash the fruit thoroughly, as the tins will be used for jelly; pare, halve it if small, quarter if large, cut out the core neatly and drop pieces into cold water. When each fruit is pared to make two layers in the preserving kettle, put them on in cold water and boil (not violently) until they can be easily pierced with a straw, or they can be steamed just as well, and more can then be done at one time. When done, lay them on a platter. Strain the water in which they were boiled and add three-quarters of a pound of sugar for each pint. Boil gently for ten minutes, skim, add the fruit, simmer for 20 minutes longer and seal. Many use an equal quantity of apples with the quince, and so pungent is the quince flavor that in eating the preserves it is difficult to distinguish which is the apple. The Pound Sweet is the best apple for the purpose. The apple will need only the 20 minutes' cooking in the sirup—no preliminary boiling or steaming. To can quinces and apples, proceed as above, using a quarter of a pound of sugar to a pound of fruit.—Ella Morris Kretschmar in Woman's Home Companion.

Discoveries at Treves.

The excavations that have been going on for months past on a plot of ground belonging to Herr Schabb, a manufacturer at Treves, have resulted in the discovery of a Roman private house, which will excite the interest of antiquaries almost as much as the famous public buildings at Augusta Trevirorum. The front of the house lies parallel with the principal street of the old Roman city. A number of blocks which served as pedestals for the wooden or stone pillars of a portico still remain. The entrance is distinctly recognizable between two buttresses and an immense heap of stones. A long entrance hall running right through the house from front to back is intersected by another corridor, so that the gigantic building is divided into four parts. Side corridors lead into the rooms. Of these the marble tessellated bathrooms for hot and cold water and warm air lie side by side and deserve special mention. The two latter were supplied with warm air through subterranean passages. The escape of the smoke was effected by means of hollow tiles laid on one another. The southwestern rooms have cellars under them. In a light court in the same part of the house there is a well preserved window, the first ever found in a Roman building.

The most interesting thing, however, is the magnificent and richly colored Mosaic floor, a rarity of the first order. Experts assign the building to the first half of the fourth century, when Augusta Trevirorum attained the zenith of its splendor under Constantine and his sons.—Berlin Dispatch to London Standard.

Salmon That Jump Fifteen Feet.

The first fall on the Mingan is about three miles from the mouth. It is 46 feet high, in three pitches about equal in height and with seething pools between. The spawning beds of the salmon are on broad, gravelly bars far up the river. They must surmount this fall once a year in order to reach them. We camped on a sand bar below the fall and watched the struggle. The broad pool below the fall was so full of these royal fish that their tails and dorsal fins could constantly be seen sticking out of the water. Every minute one or more fish would make a rush from the depths below, spring far into the air, every fiber quivering, and time after time fall back, only the most powerful and determined occasionally succeeding in passing the first pitch. Above that every nook and crevice in the rocks where the salmon could obtain a resting place was crowded. Great monsters they were, weighing from 25 to 40 pounds. How they ever made the second and third pitches I do not know, for there was not the good starting chance that they had in the deep hole below the first pitch.—Frederic Irland in Scribner's.

Queer View of Dramatic Journalism.

A London music hall singer, having recovered damages in a suit for libel against a newspaper which criticised her, a London weekly says: "If journalists have any esprit de corps, or, indeed, spirit of any kind, they will neglect to notice any performers who refuse to accept adverse criticism and absolutely to ignore them. If we do not stand together in these matters, the press may as well at once cease to pretend to express its unbiased judgment on anything or anybody. We shall be at the mercy of any 'artist' who objects to anything but servile adulation." That seems to be as queer a view to take of the duties of the theatrical critic as that of the performer who sued for libel or the jurors who gave her damages. As Stephen Blackpool remarked, "It's a' a muddle."—New York Times.

THE WHOLE system feels the effect of Hood's Sarsaparilla—stomach, liver, kidneys, heart, nerves are strengthened and SUSTAINED.

BURGLARS WANTED.

To the Burglar who entered our office and broke the Handle of Safe we extend an invitation to call again, promising him a free entry into the safe, and thereby saving him the use of the Stillson wrench. We will not insure his easy exit, but will be on hand with an ambulance and undertaker.

At the same time we give the Dairymen a guarantee for one year with our two-gang Cheese Presses. Nearly all that were imported here in the past required to be repaired within a year.

Our improved Cheese Vat is the most popular in the market. Our Babcock Testers never break the bottles. The press hoops are right for eighty lbs of curd.

And best of all the "ALPHA de LAVAL SEPARATOR" is on the list ahead of all others. Write for prices. Terms made to suit customers.
