

Drop Trout Fry From Aircraft

AUCKLAND, N.Z. (CP) — Fish are likely to rain down from the skies at intervals on New Zealand lakes from now on.

Use of air techniques for spreading fertilizer, spraying against pests and other farm functions has reached an advanced stage in New Zealand. Now trout are being air-dropped direct to their future homes.

The tests were made at Lake Waingata, in the far north of New Zealand. Previous attempts to stock the lake with trout had been only partly successful. It is a long way from the trout hatcheries and the lengthy journey by road resulted in a large proportion of the trout fry being dead on arrival.

More than 100,000 fry from trout hatcheries about 250 miles from Lake Waingata were air-dropped. The fish, each about an inch long, were placed in the hopper of a fertilizer spreading aircraft with about 200 gallons of water. The plane released its load while flying 15 to 25 feet above the lake. Careful checks later showed many thousands of live fry swimming vigorously and no sign of any dead ones.

Plans are being made for stocking many lakes by the same method.

Rome To Have A Super Airport

ROME (Reuters) — Rome expects to have one of the world's biggest and finest airports by the middle of 1960.

It will be an ultra-modern giant of concrete, marble and glass able to handle 400 aircraft and 10,000 passengers a day.

The site for the airport is 4½ K miles west of Rome, near the small Tyrrhenian fishing port of Fiumicino. The countryside there is almost flat and was once marshland.

The decision to build a new airport was taken because of the ever-increasing demands on the present airport, Ciampino, which can handle an average of 185 aircraft and about 2,500 passengers a day but, like many existing big airports all over the world, it cannot be adequately expanded.

Satchmo Gets Royal Welcome

By EDDY GILMORE
LONDON (AP) — A shouting, stamping audience and three members of the Royal Family gave Louis (Satchmo) Armstrong one of the greatest ovations of his life Tuesday night. And a British knight-actor gave him an accolade as "this noble character" of American good will.

"If anyone came into this royal festival hall with any anti-American feeling," said Sir Laurence Olivier, "then, Louis, you've blown it away."

Armstrong did five encores while the Duke of Kent, the Earl and Countess of Harewood, Hon. Gerald Lascelles and hundreds of others applauded for more. The duke, earl and Lascelles are all first cousins of the Queen.

NUTS TO PHILHARMONIC
It was a rare musical evening for Britain, for the American hot trumpet player, from his wife's home in New Orleans was being accompanied by the 100-piece Royal Philharmonic Orchestra.

At the end of Armstrong's part of the program—when he appeared to be perspiring from every pore—he played Royal Garden Blues and with a final waltz disappeared in the wings.

He had been blowing for nearly two hours.

The orchestra was to have played Liszt's Hungarian Rhapsody No. 2. Or, that's what conductor Norman del Mar thought. The audience thought differently.

When the number was due they chanted: "We want Satch, we want Satch."

Unable to make himself heard, conductor del Mar finally led his musicians off the platform.

"RATHER BASIC MUSIC"
By then it was near midnight—70 minutes after the concert should have closed.

Addressing the packed house before intermission, Olivier explained Armstrong had cancelled engagements in America and come 3,000 miles to give his services to help raise money for Hungarian relief.

"Now listen to this noble character—for that's what he is—play you some rather basic music."

The audience included scores of Londoners in evening dress who paid five guineas a ticket. It limited itself to loud applause until Armstrong got into the middle of the St. Louis Blues.

By the time he was jumping and singing When the Saints Go Marching In, the audience was cheering, stamping, yelling and whistling.

From that point on the packed house was uncontrollable.

The Society is arranging for the old clipper to be dry-docked permanently at Greenwich as an historical site.

Built on the Clyde in 1869, the Cutty Sark was only 212 feet long and of 963 gross tons. Her name was derived from the short chemist of Robert Burns' witch Nanie, who was the subject of the vessel's figurehead.

SAILS ON IVERNIA
The blocks of white pine will be packed in two crates, with total weight of 800 pounds, and will be loaded aboard the Cunard liner Ivernia at Halifax Dec. 31 for shipment to London.

The Cutty Sark's original figurehead was lost at sea years ago and the present figurehead on the vessel is a later and somewhat crude replacement that time and weather has scarred and pitted.

Carving of the figurehead will start Jan. 1 in a special booth at the boat exhibition at Olympia, London. The booth is being sponsored by The Daily Express. Under patronage of the Duke of Edinburgh, the Cutty Sark Preservation Society is arranging for the old clipper to be dry-docked permanently at Greenwich as an historical site.

MR. AND MRS. GEORGE EDWARD MURPHY AND ATTENDANTS

Nuptial Mass Unites Couple At St. Malachy's

St. Malachy's Church, Kinkora, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Wednesday, Nov. 21st, at 11 o'clock a.m. when George Edward, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Murphy, Augustine Cove, took as his bride, Regina Vivian, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Aloisius Crockett, Kinkora.

Rev. H. W. Croken performed the double ring ceremony and celebrated the Nuptial Mass. Rev. Sister Mary Pauline was organist and accompanied Mr. Reginald MacCallan, brother-in-law of the bride, who sang "Mother, At Your Feet kneeling," following the marriage, and during the signing of the register "On This Day O Beautiful Mother." The girls' choir sang appropriate hymns during the Mass.

The bride, given in marriage, by her father was very lovely in a long length gown of imported white Chantilly lace over rows of tulle and satin. The slim bodice buttoned down the back. The full skirt was accented by a front panel of Chantilly nylon net. The combination bolero jacket was fitted over a strapless gown with nipped in waistline. The bolero jacket featured a stand up collar, with an arrangement of matching lace. The pointed sleeves were long and apered over her hands. The finger tip length veil was held in place by an accordion style cap. Her only piece of jewellery was a strand of pearls, a gift of the groom. She carried a cascade bouquet of briarleaf pink roses.

She was attended by her sister Marina, as matron of honor who wore a Princess style dress of red velvet with full crinoline skirt and carried a nosegay of Lester Hibbard roses.

The bridesmaid, Kay, sister of the groom, was gowned in a Princess style dress of turquoise velvet with full crinoline skirt. Her nosegay was of Queen Elizabeth roses. Both wore feather crowned hats.

The groom was supported by his brother, Paul. The ushers were Lloyd Murphy, brother of the groom, and Ziekiel Roberts, brother of the bride.

The bride's mother, for her daughter's wedding, chose a two piece bengaline suit, with white accessories. The groom's mother wore a street length dress of brown rayon tulle crepe and cocoa colored accessories. Both wore white carnation corsages.

A wedding dinner was served at the Birch Hill Tourist Home, after the church rites, with members of the bridal party, the families and friends attending.

The bride's table was attractive with mixed mums. The three-tiered wedding cake topped with miniature bride and groom was flanked by lighted candles in silver holders. The initial piece was cut by the bridal couple. Guests were greeted at the reception by the bride and groom and their parents Miss Carona Murray was in charge of the guest book.

Rev. H. W. Croken was toast master. After a few well chosen remarks she called upon Rev. F. MacDonald who proposed the toast to the bride. Other complimentary remarks were made by Rev. Austin Bradley, Messrs. Linus Mulligan, J. A. Smith, Harry Dawson and E. C. Bell. A telegram was then read by the groomsmen from Mr. and Mrs. Joe Conway, Upper Fraser, B.C., the latter being the groom's sister. The bride's bouquet was caught by Miss Elaine Murray.

Mr. and Mrs. Murphy left immediately for a honeymoon, the latter donning a cinnamon jersey wool dress with beige accessories brown topper and white carnation corsage.

They are to make their home in Augustine Cove where the groom is associated with his father in farming operations.

Previous to her wedding the bride was tendered a shower at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Smith, where she received many beautiful gifts.
