Atlantic Manufacture Indicated For Products

HALIFAX (Special) — Early indications are that many new products will be manufactured in the Atlantic Provinces as a result of "Operation Open Door". This was reported by Chairman Dan Scouler, Jr., to the APEC Industrial Committee meeting.

Mr. Scouler pointed out that it will be several months before a full appraisal of the manufacturers incentive exhibition can be made, but already several firms have reported that they have made arrangements to have items manufactured locally which previously were being produced outside the region.

With the aim of determining the most effective way to present information concerning local products to the attention of the business community, the committee reviewed the Atlantic Provinces Trade Directory, published annually by the Atlantic Provinces Economic Council.

The committee was also brought up to date on the S.S. United States Trade Fair. Consideration is being given to the possibility of regional firms participating in this venture.

Several projects were suggested for study by the committee for its 1965 program. Members felt that close contact must be established and maintained with new industries locating in the Atlantic Provinces in order to make them fully aware of services that are provided locally, and to make use of the skills and experience which these new firms bring to the region.

Sugar Beet Farmers See Prices Too Low

By ALLEN SACKMANN

LETHBRIDGE, Alta. (CP)—A southern Alberta sugar beet farmer with thousands of dollars tied up in equipment is not as happy as a housewife when sugar prices drop.

He considers the price of sugar in Canada too low—a bargain he gives grudgingly as he hopes for a higher floor price on his product.

He's one of 1,600 growers in a $20,000,000-a-year Alberta industry who says it is costing more each year to grow the beets. Higher costs mean lower profits because the selling price of refined sugar remains low.

R. L. Jensen, president of the Alberta Sugar Beet Growers' Association and a prominent Megrath district farmer, says average investment in 1958 was $57,000 for an average return of $3,350. This year, investment ran up to $75,000 "and I'd say the return is even less."

The heavy investment results from mechanization and the low return comes from Canadian sugar policy, he says.

Mechanization has cut manual labor 50 per cent in the last 10 years. Machines have replaced much of the back-breaking labor of thinning, weeding and harvesting the beets. An annual work force of 8,000 persons, working from sunrise to sundown, has dropped to 4,000, mostly Indians.

But the saving on labor costs has been spent on specialized equipment that can't be used in other farm operations, says Mr. Jensen.

"We're not interested in talking about new labor saving devices and new farming techniques," says Mr. Jensen. "We want city people to know what a bargain they're getting at the expense of the farmer."

Housewives may not agree but Ian Angus, general manager of the Canadian Sugar factories, says: "Canadians buy the cheapest sugar in the world."

Canadian Sugar Factories work hand-in-glove with producers with sugar returns divided on the basis of 63 per cent to the producer and 37 per cent to the factory.

Last year, Alberta producers received $11,300,000 on the production of 150,000,000 pounds of sugar from 44,000 acres of beets.

Alberta producers raised 528,000 tons of beets last year, nearly half Canada's total production of 1,287,300 tons. The balance was raised in Manitoba Ontario and Quebec.
