Opening lead—queen of clubs.

In 1951, a team consisting of Charles Goren, Sidney Silodor, Mrs. Helen Sobel and Myron Field won the Masters' Team of Four Championship.

In the same year, the Vanderbilt Open Team of Four Championship was won by an aggregation which included John R. Crawford, George Rapee, Sam Stayman, B. Jay Becker and Howard Schenken.

A match of 128 deals was arranged to determine which group should represent the United States in a world title match to be played against Italy, winner of the European title. It was the greatest assemblage of bridge talent ever to have been pitted against each other.

The Crawford team was victorious finally by a margin of 880 points, having led at one stage by 2340, but also having been behind at another point 1010. As usual, the experts failed to live up to their billing in all their hands, one of which is presented herewith.

In the bidding shown, Crawford (South), in typical style, contracted for the slam without bothering to use Blackwood, cue bids or even the delicate five spade approach. Although he was fully conscious that North might have the wrong hand, his instinct told him there were many more hands which rated to make six. His bid was of slam-bang order, unscientific, but, as events proved, successful.

The South player on the Goren team who held this hand passed his partner's four spade response. The nameless South (professional courtesy) apparently gave too much weight to North's original pass.

In our view, his thinking should be on opposite lines. A jump bid to three spades, after passing, is not forcing. Therefore, a jump bid to four spades, after passing, is apt to be based on a hand where a three spade bid cannot be risked for fear of a pass by the opening bidder. Hence, the four spade bid in this sequence shows maximum values and should induce South to bid again.

The slam is easily made by establishing the hearts and discarding a club. Only the ace of diamonds is lost.

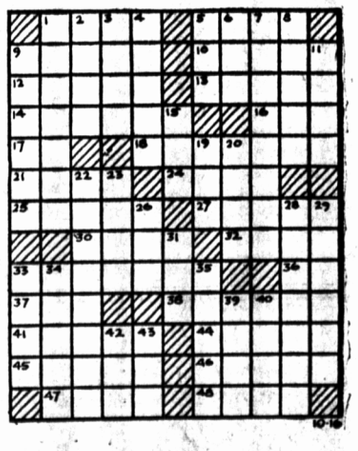
Yesterday's Answer



DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this example A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

BEDTIME STORIES

Blacky Wishes He Hadn't

Getting even doesn't pay.
Trouble never ends that way.
—Old Mother Nature.

Hooty the Owl, biggest of the Owl family was in a bad temper. Yes, Sir, he was in a bad temper, Blacky the Crow and his gang had found Hooty asleep and had wakened him in the rudest manner. They had flown around him shrieking at the top of their lungs and threatening to peck his eyes out. One or two had been bold enough to dart in and pull a feather from his coat. It was useless to try to fight so many, so Hooty had taken to his wings and flown back to his home in the darkest, most lonesome part of the Green Forest.

HOOTY AND Mrs. Hooty settled themselves to sleep for the rest of daytime.

Mrs. Hooty would be somewhere around and that would be one Owl too many. Mrs. Hooty was around. "What was that black gang doing to you?" she demanded when Hooty joined her.

"Nothing really serious. Just making things uncomfortable for me and boasting of what they were going to do to me, but didn't dare. even try," replied Hooty.

Sure that the black gang had left for another part of the Green Forest, Hooty and Mrs. Hooty settled themselves to sleep for the rest of daytime. When the Balck Shadows came creeping through the Green Forest they would start out hunting. When Hooty did awake and prepared to start out he first thought of Blacky the Crow and how he and his black gang had made things miserable for him that afternoon.

"If I just knew where to look for that black rascal I'd teach him a lesson he would never forget," thought Hooty.

With this is mind he flew to a part of the Green Forest where he had an idea those crows were roosting. If he could find them he might not be able to catch one but he could at least given them a scare that would make them shiver with fright the rest of the night.

Blacky goes to bed early. He doesn't like to be out after dark. He gets up early and he goes to bed early. When the Clack Shadows began to creep in among the trees of the Green Forest Blacky flew to his favorite roost. It was in a big hemlock tree. He crept

Has Encouraging Report On Hazard Of Fallout Materials

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new and encouraging finding about the hazard of radioactive strontium from atomic and hydrogen bomb fallout was reported Friday by a member of the U. S. Atomic Energy Commission.

At the same time, Dr. Willard F. Libby made it clear for the first time that whatever the United States has developed in the line of H-bombs with "reduced fallout," it involves a built-in principle—conceivably a new and smaller A-bomb "trigger." The trigger is at least one of the sources of radioactivity in an H-bomb.

Hitherto, one line of speculation has been that instead of any internal change in the bomb itself, detonation at high altitude was the only trick used by the commission to reduce fallout.

NOT SO DANGEROUS

Concerning radioactive strontium—most dangerous of all fallout materials and one that can cause bone cancer if present in the body in sufficient quantities—Libby said this:

New evidence suggests that strongium may not get into the body from the soil in anything like as high a proportion as previously believed.

Blacky was glad that Hooty did not live in the same part of the Green Forest. He wouldn't be a pleasant neighbor.

Blacky tucked a head under a wing and soon was fast asleep. He was wakened by a startling sound. It seeemed to come from right over his head. It frightened him so that he nearly lost his balance. It was the hunting call of Hooty the Great Horned Owl. There is no more fierce sound, no more dreadful sound, to the smaller folk of the Green Forest than Hooty's hunting call.

"I hope he isn't looking for me," thought Blacky and shivered. A-
