

President Outlines Protective Program

WASHINGTON, (CP) — President Eisenhower today called on the United States and other free nations to protect themselves from a "nuclear holocaust" by maintaining the military power to convince Communists of the futility of aggression.

He outlined in his annual State of the Union message to Congress the five fundamentals of a vast program of United States military strength.

1. Ability "instantly to strike back with destructive power in response to an attack."
2. Avoidance of "undue reliance on one weapon or one kind of warfare."
3. Balanced and flexible military planning emphasizing air power, new weapons, continental defence and "a strategic concentration of strength through redeployment of certain forces."
4. Improvement and expansion of United States supplies of nuclear weapons for land, naval and air forces.
5. Efficiency and ingenuity to provide a program that could be carried forward from year to year until the threat of aggression has disappeared.

STRONGER THAN EVER

Eisenhower, surveying the world scene, said the "free nations are collectively stronger than at any time in recent years."

But he warned of the "sobering problems" which remained as a result of the policies and strength of the Soviet-Communist bloc.

The military threat is but one menace to our freedom and security. We must not only deter aggression; we must also frustrate the effort of Communists to gain their goals by subversion.

Eisenhower's address came a day after the Democrats took control of Congress from the Republicans.

Newsy Notes

There is a lot of investigational nutritional work being carried on by research workers on these problems.

One of the fur journals reprints, by request, from the "Chinchilla News" an article by J. C. Bechdolt, Br. C. A. A., Los Angeles, entitled: "Beware of False Prophets With High Pressure Advice". His first two paragraphs read as follows:

"The chinchilla raiser is a fair prey for any number of rackets involving the sale of some product or service. These depend upon the established gullibility of the raiser and are designed mainly to raise the living standard of the seller.

The multiplication of organizations, grading systems, registration systems, sales outlets, advisory services, supplements, baths, medications and such continue to increase. The "gray train" grows longer with each gimmick, and each prophet is able to acquire a following no matter how fanciful the claims or promises."

These follow four columns describing these characters who introduce themselves as: "The Dean of Chinchillodom" or "Chinchilla's Grand Old Man" or just "Good Old Joe". He mentions "Chinchillas have been promoted and sold like gold bricks for years."

In the Nov. 22nd, 1954 issue of FUR AGE WEEKLY, the President of the Seattle Fur Exchange, whose firm handles pelts for the Chinchilla Association of America, states: "Good color is actually more important than good quality in chinchilla skins."

"Each day sees a number of shipments of chinchilla coming in and we are sorry to report the good skins are very limited in number."

In this same issue, under the heading: "Rancher's Calendar", there are 64 fur animal shows listed for December, 1954, and 50 of these are Branch chinchilla shows; while under the "Auction Calendar" for December, 33 fur sales are listed, and chinchillas are not mentioned.

The November 1st issue of the same journal carried a two-page ad of "Empress Chinchilla" for the Farmers' Chinchilla Cooperative of America, Inc. This firm is advertising: "the precious fur for the average food ad that a 'good' rating and the average automobile ad had a 33% rating.

This seems to indicate that chinchilla, the "Fur of the Mist" is catching the attention of some who may be interested in luxury furs. The chinchilla fur industry should endeavour to increase the proportion of real good quality skins, with the colour demanded by the trade, and find a lucrative place for other pelts that are accumulating.

At the annual meeting of the Maritime Chinchilla Breeders Association held in Fredericton, N.B., a membership increase from 58 to 135 was reported. Mr. John H. Jarvis was re-elected President of the Association.
