BLOCK VOTE ON CLOSURE MOTION

Gov't Outmanoeuvred By Opposition On Pipeline

OTTAWA (CP)—The Progressive Conservative and CCF parties outmanoeuvred the government Thursday night and blocked a vote on a closure motion which would have ended debate on the committee stage of its controversial pipeline bill. The Opposition achieved this major victory by employing a series of procedural weapons in a six-hour period of wrangling that forced four roll-call votes. The climax came when Colin Cameron (CCF-Nanaimo) moved a motion of censure against the Ottawa Journal for publishing letters which he said were derogatory to the dignity of Parliament. His motion, which followed a series of others by Opposition members calling for adjournment and a decision as to whether the speaker could rule on an appeal from a committee chairman's decision, came towards the 10 p.m. adjournment. If the bill had been voted on and adopted, committee debate on the seven clauses of the bill would have continued past 10 p.m. until 1 a.m. and then terminated. But the House adjourned at 10 p.m. with Mr. Cameron's censure motion still being debated. DIDN'T SEEK CONSENT Unanimous consent is needed for the Commons to sit past this normal adjournment time, except where a closure motion has been passed and the adjournment hour set back. The government made no attempt to seek the required unanimous consent, which obviously would not have been granted by the Opposition. Speaker Rene Beaudoin suggested, as the 10 p.m. adjournment drew near, that parts of the letters were defamatory towards himself but asked that debate on the censure motion be delayed to another time. Mr. Drew objected, pointing out that the motion was debatable. Then, at another point, Finance Minister Harris, government House leader, rose on a point of order to say the Commons should not delay longer. Trying to get the House back on its closure course, he asked for a vote on the Opposition appeal against an earlier ruling by chairman E. T. Applewhite, while the House was in committee, that Mr. St. Laurent's closure motion was in order. The Opposition's procedural victory upset the government's schedule for getting its pipeline bill through the Commons. The closure, if it had materialized, was to have been followed today by notice of a fourth closure motion which would have terminated debate on third and final readings of the bill Monday night. The bill now will be stalled in the House at least until Tuesday, only two days from the June 7 deadline set by the government for Commons and Senate passage of the legislation. The Senate apparently anticipating that it would get the bill early next week, adjourned Thursday for the weekend and decided to get back to work at 3 p.m. Monday instead of suspending operations until 8 p.m. Tuesday as is customary.

Slight Increase In Potato Prices

"With very little movement of potatoes in the past week, prices have moved up a little again, and yesterday local dealers were quoting $2.75 per 75 lbs. bulk at shipping point," the P.E.I. Potato Marketing Board manager, E.W. Campbell said yesterday. "Track holdings have been reduced in Montreal and Toronto but there is still no keen demand. Most growers are busy planting and there are not many potatoes offering. This should tend to strengthen the market, but form here on sprouts will be a problem." "Movement from the province in May is again much higher than last year, and our total movement of potatoes is now above original estimates of our total merchantable stocks." It seems to be the general opinion that less than 300 cars remain in the Province, so over 98% of the 55 crop is gone.

Raft Still Close To Sable Island

HALIFAX (CP) — The raft l'Egare, drifting off the Nova Scotia coast in changing winds, reported Thursday it was northeast of Sable Island. Because of fog it could not fix its exact position. The four French-born sailors aboard the raft, trying to drift to Europe in two or three months, asked for the position of dangerous sandbars that run out from the Island. A transport department official on the island told the Maritime ham radio network that the raft would likely pass the island without difficulty.

Mr. Daly, appointed a director in 1936 and a railroader for 53 years, had been in poor health for several weeks.

CNR president, Donald Gordon, in a tribute to the man who started his career as a brakeman, described him as "unique among our directors" and a "warm personality." Mr. Daly, son of a railway conductor, started in Winnipeg with the Canadian Northern Railway, which later became part of the CNR.

Surviving are his widow, the former Nina Ault of Iroquois, Ont., and two daughters, Mrs. Howard Armstrong, Vancouver, and Mrs. N. E. Schofield, Senneville.

BOMB EXPLODES, DYNAMITE FOUND

Work Suspended On Key British Base On Cyprus

NICOSIA, Cyprus (Reuters) — Work was suspended Thursday on Britain's new Middle East military base near Limassol after a bomb exploded, slightly injuring one Cypriot worker and damaging a building under construction at the base.

The threat of further sabotage was revealed with the discovery of a hidden cache of dynamite nearby. Security forces immediately began searching all Cypriot workers on the $34,000,000 project, due to be occupied this year as the nerve centre of all British military camps and air bases from Malta to the Persian gulf.

Meanwhile, the death toll in the last 11 days of increased violence in Cyprus rose to 19 with the fatal shooting of a Greek-Cypriot by unknown gunmen near Agros, in southeast Cyprus, Wednesday night.

The 17th and 18th deaths also were Greek-Cypriots who died in hospital overnight from wounds received in earlier terrorist shooting incidents.

ASKED FOR INFORMATION The people of the curfewed town of Famagusta were given 24 hours to supply information about a terrorist bomb attack Wednesday which killed two British soldiers and injured 22.

District commissioner B. J. Weston threatened to impose collective punishment if no information is volunteered about the attack—the bloodiest since the incident in the island colony's 14 months of union-with-Greece violence.

Weston said it was deplorable for a civilized community such as Famagusta to have such a record of violence. Eleven persons have died in a series of bomb incidents there in the last seven months.

In Nicosia, Cyprus governor Sir John Harding, top target of the terrorists, rode in a black, bullet-proof limousine to take the salute at a parade of 550 British soldiers and police to mark Queen Elizabeth's official birthday.

Crucial 3-Day Debate Opens In French House

PARIS (AP) — A crucial three-day debate on the whole range of Premier Guy Mollet's policies opened Thursday with irate denunciations of independence for Tunisia and Morocco.

Mollet's Opposition had been expected to open with a barrage against his program for Algeria—where a nationalist rebellion is mounting in violence against a big buildup of French forces.

Instead, the opening speakers in the National Assembly debate dwelt on what they called the errors of freeing Tunisia and Morocco from French control. Neither of these protectorates is quite fully and formally independent yet.

DEMAND INDEPENDENCE Both Tunisia and Morocco were accused of undermining the French position in Algeria. France calls Algeria a part of France itself and says it is not eligible for independence from the homeland.

Jacques Izerni, an independent representing a Paris district, asserted France's north African trouble started when former premier Pierre Mendes-France flew to Tunisia in 1954 and promised to give that protectorate internal autonomy in order to get nationalists there to lay down their arms.

TAKES SALUTE AT COLORS CEREMONY

Queen Shows No Concern At Assassination Rumors

LONDON (CP) — Queen Elizabeth, apparently oblivious to rumors that her life might be in danger from Cypriot terrorists, Thursday took the salute from Britain's famous guards regiments at the trooping the color ceremony honoring her official birthday.

It was her last big engagement before a state visit to Stockholm from June 8 to June 10. Nothing marred the brilliant pageantry of the 200-year-old ceremony, carried out under a cloudless sky.

There had been reports recently that Scotland Yard is taking special precautions to guard the Royal Family against attack by gunmen from the rebellious Mediterranean colony of Cyprus. But although the usual police patrols were present to hold back crowds, there was no sign of extra security today around the Queen.

The guards, resplendent in scarlet tunics and bearskin hats, marched and counter-marched in full military pageantry. The Queen, also in scarlet tunic and wearing a white-plumed tricorn hat, rode her favorite charger Winston during the spectacular 90-minute ceremony. A crowd of 5,000 looked on.

CANADIAN VISITORS Visitors from all sections of the commonwealth mingled with holiday-minded Londoners along the parade route from Buckingham Palace, from the tree-lined hall to the Horse Guards parade, where the trooping ceremony took place.

Canadian onlookers included Mrs. L. B. Pearson, wife of the external affairs minister; Canadian high commissioner Norman Robertson and Mrs. Robertson;

Brig. J. E. C. Pangman of Toronto, member of the Canadian Joint Staff in London, and Mrs. Pangman; and representatives of the provincial agents-general offices. Mrs. Pearson is here on holiday.

Taking a special interest in the precision drill were 70 Canadian university students in London as members of the Fort Henry guard from Kingston, Ont. The students, who had a special vantage point on the parade square, will give a demonstration of old-time precision drill themselves at the royal tournament starting June 6.

Highlight of the ceremony was the precision marching of the five guards regiments. Without making a mistake, they marched in slow time and fast, formed fours, wheeled in line and in column for more than an hour. Color escort was provided by the 3rd battalion of the Grenadier Guards, whose color was being trooped.

FLYPAST SALUTE Watching their mother take the salute were Prince Charles and Princess Anne, who arrived at the Horse Guard parade in an open carriage accompanied by the Queen Mother and Princess Margaret.

After the ceremony the Queen rode at the head of the household cavalry back to Buckingham Palace, where she took the salute at a flypast of RAF aircraft.

At Allied headquarters in Fontainebleau, France, British and Canadian personnel paraded before three reviewing officers. The troops marched to the music of an RCAF pipe band specially flown to Fontainebleau from its NATO base at Marville, France.

Doctor Says Cancer Research Is Hampered By Indifference

QUEBEC (CP) — An official of the Canadian Medical Association, said Thursday progress in cancer research is being hindered by a large number of indifferent and fatalistic laymen and by some physicians with the same attitude.

Dr. Renaud Lemieux, president designate of the CMA, told the annual meeting of the Canadian Cancer Society that this "indifference and fatalism" shown by the laymen and physicians "permit a continued toll of death and disability that need not occur."

"The magnitude of the (cancer) problem and the severity of its effects on the community are too often overlooked." He described cancer as "after heart disease the most important factor of mortality today." He added: "Contrary to the fascinating results reached during the past decade by new methods of treatment in the control of infectious diseases the control of cancer has been slow laborious, without color, and, in many instances, discouraging."

Mr. Stocker, F. H. Silversides, Halifax, and M. A. Farmer, Charlottetown, were appointed delegates to the biennial meeting of the Canadian Hospital Association. Miss Janet Story, vice-president of the Newfoundland Association of registered nurses, presided over a panel discussion on "nurse relations and the hospital."
