Stresses Need For Increased Milk Consumption

HAMILTON, (CP)—It is difficult to see just how Canada's tremendous production of milk can be disposed of unless some action is taken to stimulate domestic consumption, stated W. Frank Jones, president of the Borden Company Limited and a past president of the National Dairy Council of Canada, in an address Thursday before the 87th annual convention of the Western Ontario Dairyman's Association. Mr. Jones said that "milk production in Canada is expected to be even higher this year than in 1953, and government economists forecast that if conditions are favorable it will approximate 18 billion pounds. This would represent an all-time record high and due to embargoes and dollar shortages export markets are inadequate. Milk production is increasing at a more rapid rate than our population. Mr. Jones claimed that "dairy products prices in Canada are reasonable by almost any standard."

Montague In 4-2 Victory Over Georgetown

"The Montague Shmohawks rapped out a 4-2 victory over their traditional rivals, the Georgetown Eagles, in a hard fought contest played at the Montague rink last night. A very large crowd was on hand to witness the meeting of the giants nor were they disappointed, as both teams played a wide open game of rough, fast hockey. For the second opener, it was more like a mid-season game with neither team letting up on the attack. With the play searing back and forth throughout the first period, neither team cracked until hard working MacNeill slipped into the corner and placed the first goal in the dying minutes of the period. The second period saw the rest of the scoring. Within three minutes Montague had scored two goals by MacLean and L. Shepherd, both from Clements, and four men were in the penalty box following a fistic fracas in the corner. Two were sitting out for the goalies who had also joined in the free-for-all. When play resumed Montague got its first two goals, and within another minute Georgetown came back to tie the score at 2-2. Once again the evenly matched teams fought for position, but not until the dying minutes of the period did the break occur when Clements drove in the final two counters for Montague from Nelson and MacLean. The last period went scoreless with both goalies rising to stellar heights, repelling shot after shot from all angles. Georgetown fought valiantly to break into the scoring, but Montague was airtight, and threw back every attack. Lineups:— Montague: Goal, Mills; defence, Clements, McRae, F. Shepherd, Watterworth; forwards, Stewart, Roberts, L. Shepherd, MacLean, Nelson, Hughes. Georgetown: Goal, Sullivan; defence, MacPhee, Johnston, Matheson, McConnell; forwards, Landry, MacNeill, Murphy, Stevens, Martell, Publicover. Summary:— First Period 1—Georgetown, MacNeill. (Murphy, Landry) 1:50 Penalties: None. Second Period 2—Montague, MacLean. (Clements) 2:20 3—Montague, L. Shepherd. (Clements) 3:12 4—Georgetown, Landry. (Matheson) 3:15 5—Montague, Clements. (Nelson) 4:05 6—Montague, Clements. (MacLean) 4:35 Penalties: Sullivan, Mills, MacNeill, F. Shepherd, McRae. Third Period Scoring—None. Penalties: None. Referee: C. Landry.

U. S. Business Men Begin To Look For Soviet Trade

(EDITORS NOTE: The following article represents a U. S. viewpoint on the question of East-West trade.) By J. M. ROBERTS JR. Associated Press News Analyst: American business men are beginning to show signs of competing with British interests for non-strategic trade with Russia. The Soviet Union is reported to be anxious to buy fats and farm machinery, among other things. The United States has the fats and machinery. Russia has the money, both in gold and foreign exchange. Who gets the trade, however, is a minor matter in itself. There are political factors involved that are of far greater significance. Britain is so in need of export markets that it influences her basic policy in both cold and hot war. For her to develop an important trade connection with Russia would just possibly, in some future circumstance, affect her whole attitude toward Russia just as it affects her policy toward Red China. The United States was greatly concerned last year about Russia's efforts to establish such a situation. Andrei Gromyko's appointment as ambassador to London and his subsequent efforts in the field of trade were accepted in Washington as a definite attempt to drive one more wedge between British and American thinking. Shipments of Russian gold to London seem to be a further attempt by Russia to establish her position as a sound customer. That does not mean there is fear of a serious British defection. Britain and the United States are too closely tied together for that. At worst it would be merely another complication. There is just a possibility, on the other hand, that revival of trade between the United States and Russia would have a healing tendency. One of the ways in which Russians justify their attitude toward the world is based on fear of economic as well as political boycott of the Communist regime. They themselves rely on economic factors for the success of the world revolution they expect. They naturally expect retaliation, and have been getting it ever since the revolution. A demonstration by the United States that some channels of trade are open might just affect this Kremlin thinking a little bit. A greater long-range effect might be produced by helping Russia solve her food problems. It would be taking a chance if it went beyond a country's ability to conduct a war. A well-fed people is far more likely to accept the leadership of its government. Industrial workers must be fed to keep up their productivity. But well-fed peoples, also, do not put pressure upon their governments to make war. This may seem a minor matter in Russia, where about it, but the Kremlin has been demonstrating recently that it is not completely immune to public opinion. That's why it wants to buy food and increase its own agricultural production.
