

Democrats Talking Purge Of Some Elements In South

WASHINGTON (AP)—Liberal Democrats in the Senate. That would give them an edge of 68 to 32 over the Republicans. Even in the present Congress, the president had little trouble with the Senate. His big headache was the House, where a conservative coalition blocked some of his most controversial programs.

merca committee, a post he would lose in a purge. Representative Richard Bolling (Dem. Mo.) another leader of the liberal group, said: "It is not enough to have a majority on the floor of the House. We have got to get the material from the committees for that majority to work on."

SEEN AS PRIORITY
Health care for the aged under social security as one of President Johnson's top priorities in the last session of Congress, but it was bottled up in the conservative-oriented House and means committee.

If the liberals succeeded in purging Williams and Watson when the House convenes in January, they will be setting a precedent. Even in 1948, when many southerners revolted against Harry S. Truman and four Southern states were carried by states' rights; Strom Thurmond, no one was punished by the party after the dust settled.

But both Blatnik and Bolling said they feel the big increase in moderate and liberal Democrats in the house in Tuesday's election has given them the strength to prevail this time, even if the White House might oppose the drastic step.

"If the president wants it, it will happen," Bolling said. "If he doesn't want it, there will still be a fight."

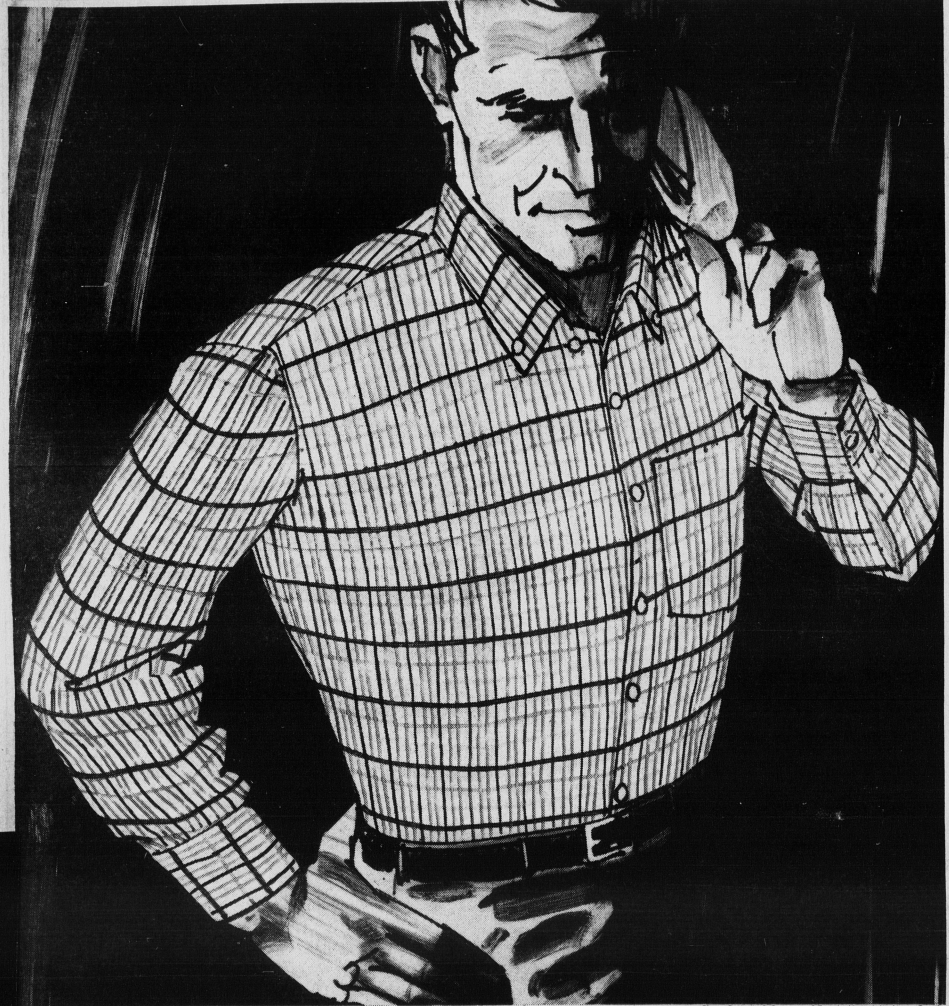

Blatnik said, however, "I doubt very much that there will be much, if any, White House interference."

BID FOR VOICE
Liberals in both parties are concentrating on three major committees. There are vacancies on all three committees, some left by conservatives, after Tuesday's voting.

With only a few contests undecided, the political makeup of the House in the new Congress apparently will be 265 Democrats and 140 Republicans. That's a gain of 38 for the Democrats.

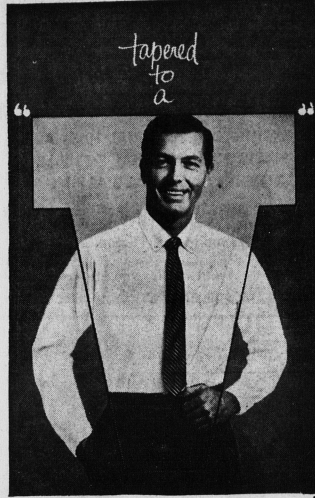

An analysis of the voting records of members returning and of factors involved in the defeats of other points to an ideological House lineup comparable to the political division—295 liberals and 140 conservatives. In the Senate, the prospects for success of the Johnson program are even brighter than in the House. Final returns point
