MOTHERS' MARCH GETS RESULTS

Last night's below zero temperatures didn't stop the members of "weaker sex" as they canvassed the city and adjacent sections as part of the "Mothers' March of Dimes". The results of the door-to-door canvass in Charlottetown was referred to as "marvelous" and at a late hour last night a total of $944.50 had been collected with only part of the returns being in. Here two of the mothers, Mrs. Christine Phillips, right, and Mrs. Phyllis Mullen, hand in their returns to Harvey Campbell, Mrs. J.B. Flemming chairman of the mothers' march, and Miss Patricia Wynn.

Memorial Building Design Selection Report Released

Six basic factors were taken into consideration by the judges appraising the designs for the new Confederation memorial building, and the degree to which the winning competitor achieved the set standards are given in a report submitted by the judges.

In considering the site plan, the jury noted that the winner has integrated the new building design with the design of the historic provincial building with dramatic effect. There is a civic quality about the building, the report said, and glimpses of the Memorial Hall are given from many points. Landscape and parking facilities were also well planned by the competitor.

SCALE IS GOOD

The scale of the buildings as envisioned by the winner was said to be good. The buildings blend in with the size of other buildings, rather than overwhelming them. Interior scale is also good.

Plans and sections were one of the greatest factors considered. The winning design provides for beauty in terms of circulation and well proportioned space. Entry and accessibility to all or any of the buildings was studied to a great degree. The jury recommended that the questions of elevators and theatre seating and lighting be studied further by the architect.

Materials of many types were suggested by competitors, but the jury felt that the use of stone as close as possible in color to that of the Provincial Building, as suggested by the winning architect, would be most appropriate. Other materials equally suitable to the furnishings of the rooms in which they are placed will add greatly to the interest of the interior, the jury said.

A NOBLE ROOM

The memorial hall will fulfill the high hopes of the memorial foundation as a noble room in which the architect has expressed the idea of the founding fathers by their words engraved in stone, the jury report said.

The final consideration was square footage. The jury said the winning design was favorable in this respect but above all it demonstrated quality without extravagance.

Top Models' Display Here Is Suggested

It was learned yesterday that the provincial government will make an effort to have the top three prize-winning models of the Confederation memorial building brought to Charlottetown for display in the Provincial Building.

The suggestion was made by Walter De Silva, provincial town planning officer, who said yesterday that displaying the models would give people a better picture of the building designs than photographs and sketches.

"Aside from this, the models would be a tourist attraction and have great publicity value for the undertaking," said Mr. De Silva.

Co. Court Judge Acquits Accused

Richard Ernest Ward of Charlottetown was found not guilty of attempted break and entry at his trial before Judge C. St. Clair Trainor in Queens County Court, yesterday afternoon.

Ward was charged with attempting to break and enter the United Services Officers Club, Haviland Street, Charlottetown, early on the morning of Dec. 28, 1961.

The Crown produced four witnesses, Constables Charles Ready and Douglas Taylor, Charlottetown police force; Oliver Pineau, steward at the club, and Carl Doucette an alleged accomplice of Ward. The accused declined testimony and did not call any witnesses.

The second speedy trial slated to be heard, that of Carl Willard Doucette, Charlottetown, also charged with attempting to break and enter the United Services Officers Club, was not completed and the hearing was adjourned until Tuesday, Feb. 6.

Defence counsel in both cases is Allison M. Gillis, while the case for the Crown is being conducted by Deputy Attorney-General J. Arthur McGuigan.

Souris Jaycees Suggest Names

SOURIS — Suggestions for names for the unnamed streets in the town will be given to the town council at its meeting Monday night for approval. The names will be given to the council members by the Souris Junior Board of Trade.

The names that will be submitted will be Maple Street, for the street that meets Chapel Street near the MacInnis propery; Cash Crescent for the new street in the Co-op housing development; Lennox Street for the street running off Main Street near the federal building; Colville Street for the street running through the pulp field; and Blackett Street, for the first street on the left hand side off Chapel Street.

The names were obtained following a request a few months ago by the board members for citizens to suggest appropriate titles for the unmarked streets, and it was decided at last night's meeting to present them for approval.

The members will try to organize a debate for Regional High Schools in Kings County the last of April and will invite the various schools to arrange the topics.

A trophy will be awarded annually to the winning team and with three winnings the trophy becomes the permanent property of the team.

The junior board of trade members will draw up the rules for the debate and try to bring judges in from outside the county. It is hoped that two teams from each school will participate and that the debate will last two nights.

It was decided that the members would erect a large sign at Borden in order to advertise Souris and that the merchants in the town would be canvassed in order to help defray costs of the sign.

It was also decided that a sum of money would be given to the Souris Athletic Commission to organize sports in the town. The board members will also contact other organizations in the town to get them to help the commission.

Wendell Graham, Prominent Island Businessman Passes

MONTAGUE — The death of Wendell Graham of Gaspereaux in Quincy, Mass., yesterday about 4 p.m. has brought to a close the life of one of the province's best known and respected fish packers and canners. Mr. Graham's death followed surgery. He was in his 67th year.

Starting his small business more than 25 years ago, Mr. Graham succeeded in building one of the largest businesses in Kings County.

A quiet, unassuming man, he was always ready to help the fishermen and indeed on many occasions, assisted them financially.

He had numerous friends, many of them in the Eastern States and Canada where he carried out most of his business. He will be remembered by all who knew him as a successful man, both in character and in business

The late Mr. Graham was born at Gaspereaux where he spent his entire life with the exception of a short period in the air force during the First World War.

He is survived by his wife, the former Janie Boyd MacLure and two sons, Grant and Gerald who were closely associated in business with their father.

His remains will arrive at the Murray River Funeral Home on Wednesday evening and funeral arrangements will be announced later.

23 Rotary Committees Report On Activities

At the half yearly luncheon meeting of the Rotary Club in the Charlottetown Hotel yesterday, four key men on the directorate called upon the 23 committee chairmen under their supervision to present reports on their activities during the first six months of their term in office and announce plans for the balance of the Rotary year.

The meeting was presided over by president, John Simmonds with vice-president, L D. MacKay as co-chairman.

Under club service, 10 committees reported through their chairmen and director, Mr. MacKay. E.D. Reid as director of vocational service had four reports submitted by committee chairmen and international service director, Dr. G.G. Houston also accounted for four reporting committees.

Community service directed by W.R. Jenkins brought to light the activities of the two major committees which require the all-out co-operation of every Rotarian, the Rotary auction and the Easter seals campaign.

In reporting on the Easter seals campaign, W.J. Hancox said that more than 15,000 names were on the mailing list now being compiled for the province-wide distribution of literature in an endeavour to top the success of last year's campaign.

In reporting on the Rotary auction, Roy MacGillivray described the most recent effort as the most successful on record and paid tribute to the donors, the purchasing public and the zeal of individual Rotarians.

C.F. Bentley, reporting on public information, acknowledged with thanks the publicity given by The Guardian and Evening Patriot each week as subjects of varied interest are dealt with by speakers at the Rotary luncheon meetings.

In summing up following the reports, Mr. Simmonds said We as Rotarians can feel justifiably proud of the manner in which we have measured up to national president, Joseph Abey's theme for the year "act". "We must not become complacent and rest on our laurels, but strive through further action to achieve higher goals," Mr. Simmonds said.

Cam Lindsay, of Kentville, N.S., was a visiting Rotarian.

Possibilities Are Foreseen For Potato Irradiator Use

By NEIL A. MATHESON
(Provincial Farm Editor)

Exciting possibilities were seen here today in the potato irradiation developement to prevent sprouting, as the arrival of a 45-ton experimental machine was awaited here.

The machine was due to begin work in the province yesterday, but Garth Harrison, acting district fruit and vegetable inspector, Canada department of Agriculture, said yesterday that he has no word of its arrival, and suggested it might be delayed.

The test machine, too small for commercial purposes, will handle a 17-pound box every 24 seconds or 2,500 pounds per hour.

TOUR ARRANGED

It has worked well in laboratory test conditions, but the tour across five provinces has been arranged to give the machine a work-out under commercial conditions.

Although it is too early to judge its effectiveness, Mr. Harrison suggested that the development could be extremely useful if it would eliminate such industry problems as discoloration, soft and spongy potatoes, and sprouting.

Some 30 dealers and shippers are co-operating in Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick, and Prince Edward Island, with one firm in Nova Scotia.

The initial cost of a machine large enough to be commercially feasible was seen as a likely drawback to anything but subsidized or co-operative use, as it would probably be too costly for any single firm to handle, it was believed.

But the operating cost at seven cents per bushel would be economically sound provided it will do what its originators claim.

Irradiated potatoes will keep up to four years, it has been claimed, although the spuds to be irradiated here will not be kept beyond June and July.

Tablestock inspectors will watch them closely with checks every two weeks and the potatoes will eventually be followed through to the market as the consumer reaction will be studied.

There is no danger, the food and drug people have assured, but the actual reaction of the consumers is being awaited for all of that.

Co-operation dealers include Keith S. Harrington and R. Champion and Son, Kensington; Simmons and MacFarlane, Miscouche; H.B. Willis, O'Leary; Summerside Co-op at Summerside; E.D. Reid and Producers Co-op, Charlottetown; Canada Packers at Souris; and Eric Robinson, Albany.
