BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

(By Thornton W. Burgess)
GOLDIE'S CLEVER COUSIN
Though humblest of the humble, still
The craftsman glories in his skill.
—Old Mother Nature.
That is as it should be. It is one of the first laws of Old Mother Nature. It is those among her children who do best what it is given them to do who live best and longest. And those who take pride in what they do always are the ones who do things best. Alas, that this seems to be no longer true among so many of mankind; that so many no longer take pride in the work of their hands, no longer are true craftsmen.
To Farmer Brown's boy, spending the winter in the Land-of-always-summer, called the Tropics, almost everything he saw was new to him and of course strange, even queer. Hardly a tree or plant was familiar and most of the feathered folk he so far had seen were complete strangers to him.
"What kind of fruit do you call that?" he asked of the friend who was with him. He pointed up to some odd-looking objects hanging from branches of a tall tree. They hung down several feet and were swinging gently in the wind. His friend chuckled. "They are not exactly fruit," said he.
"Then what are they, some kind of growth? I've noticed that some trees have a lot of other plants growing on them," said Farmer Brown's boy.
Again his friend chuckled. "Those things didn't grow there. They were put there," said he.
"What in the world were they put there for and by whom?" cried Farmer Brown's boy.
"Well sit down on this fallen tree for a few minutes and watch," was the reply.
They didn't sit there long before he saw a black bird as big or perhaps a little bigger than Creaker the Grackle whom he knew so well back home. This bird was flying and the spread tail was bright yellow. The bill was yellow too. For the moment he forgot the queer things hanging from the tree.
"What kind of a bird is that?" cried Farmer Brown's boy excitedly, for never before had he seen one like it.
"That is Yellow-tail. Some folks call him Corn Bird because he likes corn so well and eats a lot of it in gardens. But Yellow-tail is a much better name. He is a cousin of..."
"Look!" exclaimed Farmer Brown's boy. "He is at one of those things hanging down on that tree! Now he has gone in it!" On his face was a funny look as he turned to his friend.
The latter laughed right out. "I started to tell you that Yellow-tail is a cousin of Goldie the Baltimore Oriole. I guess you know him back home."
Farmer Brown's boy nodded. "Of course I know Goldie, and Mrs. Goldie. They build a nest every year in a big elm tree near the house, a hanging nest beautifully woven and—" He stopped abruptly and stared at his friend with such a funny look of astonishment, of unbelief struggling with belief, that his friend laughed right out.
"Yes," said he, "those are nests. They make Goldie's nest seem pretty small, don't they? Some of those nests are five feet long and they are wonderfully woven. Notice that they are very much bigger at the bottoms where the birds sit on the eggs. I guess you seldom if ever find more than one Oriole nest in a tree, but Goldie's cousins down here are very social. There are a dozen nests in that tree."
"And what nests?" cried Farmer Brown's boy.
"I'll get one for you to take home to show the folks there what sort of craftsmen we have down here," replied the friend.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE—Here's how to work it:
A X Y D L B A A K R
is LONG FELLOW
One letter simply stands for another. In this example A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

LIL ABNER

RIP KIRBY

Unfortunately for West, the top club was the most attractive opening lead. (Actually, a heart opening would have been ideal.) However, as the play proceeded, it did not matter much! East collected two club tricks and led a third. South ruffed and immediately cashed two high trumps, then tried the heart finesse. In view of the bidding, it was not surprising that this failed, and with it, the contract.
The right line of play in this type of situation is clearly marked. It involves a slight risk, but far less risk than trusting to the heart finesse! At the third trick declarer should cash the diamond ace, then the diamond king, and should ruff a third round of diamonds with a high trump. Now is the time to lead ace and another trump and with trumps breaking 2-2, it costs declarer nothing to lead dummy's fourth diamond in the hope that it will be East, not West, who has the remaining high card in the suit. When that condition proves true, South simply concedes the trick to East, discarding a heart from his own hand. Now, obviously, East cannot lead without giving South a free heart finesse or, if East has kept a club to return, letting South discard his last heart while he ruffs in dummy.
It is also obvious that if East does not follow suit to the fourth diamond, declarer can ruff and try the heart finesse.
