ELLEN'S DIARY

by an Island Farmer's Wife

Where now is the Maytime? Gone from this place... out and over the hill. She went away gently one night in the dimness and June, well beloved month, is here.

The best time of all the year—the Junetime? Yet how entrancing are the months following, of maturing summer. How beautiful the peace of Autumn with the dying fires of another year smouldering, flaming, on field and in woodland. And Winter—white, sparkling, silent—the resting period, too has its charms.

Further into the cropping this week took the folks at Alderlea. Busy it was for the farmers, who attended religiously to the churning and went then to the cares of the field-work. By day and for the tractor-man sometimes on into the night, the farming continued.

James himself attends to the rites of the sowing with no apparent lack of interest or zeal. With the horses in the old seeder, Mack, youngest grandson of all, a coming-six fellow, waits for his companion... When school classes reconvene in August this lad will be there with the rest.

"Who is Mack?" a farmwife queried the other day. "I don't seem to know him." He is the only boy of this place. In him we rest many a hope for its future welfare. He is shortish, and broad and fair — a likeable and knowing child for his years. Not so merry as Gage, his cousin. Naturally more sober and given to reasoning things. "Why?" is often on his lips. He sings tunes he learns from his mother or Granddaughter or picks up from the radio, and sometimes on a machine along the quiet fields, he fits words to the music it makes. This week of weather which mostly favored the fieldwork saw considerable progress made at the sowing, at Rob's and at "the other farm" beyond. It enters now the last lap of its course.

And what remember we now of this week's days which slipped away fast, to be gone as a whisper of a young spring wind in the new leaves... a rustle and silence? The flash of busy wings about. The delicate deepening greens on Alder and birch and poplar, the rose-red of maple. And the white crowns of wild pear and cherry in hedgerow and woodland

This year's Maytime was here and is gone. And June well beloved month is come. Helen C. Crew sings "A Song of June" in these verses:

"Oh hush! Oh hush! June draweth near; I know it by the trilling clear From bluebird's breast, When from his nest He rises in the golden air.

Oh hush! Oh hush! How yonder tree Is clothed in white all maidenly; While every bloom, Sweet with perfume, Is plundered by a dusty bee.

Oh small and taste! Oh now in haste, The sun is opening every flower. See yonder rose It's heart disclose. June ripens in one perfect hour!"

Until Monday — — — Diary — — — Good-night — — —

Words Of The Wise

People cannot be reformed by telling them that their action is right and that one wrong. The chances are that even the dangerous criminal knows right and wrong about as well as the average citizen. When character is lacking, education increases the ability of the person to make trouble. The whole structure of human society rests on character. —(William Feather).

A Tasty Bit Of Color— Fresh Green Asparagus

There's very fine fresh asparagus in the market today, Madame," said the Chef. "Beautiful big bunches ready to use in many ways. Most chefs are very particular about preparing asparagus. Because it is grown in sandy soil, it must be carefully washed in cold water—especially the delicate tips. Next, cut off the root ends up to where the green begins; thin-peel or scrape the stalks; then cook in an asparagus boiler."

SOMETHING NEW in vegetable main dishes, an asparagus-potato carrot platter with creamy egg sauce, is perfect for warm weather.

of 1/2 lb. each; that is, one for each person. Stand the bunches in the lower part of a 2-qt. double boiler. Pour in boiling water to the depth of 3"; add 1 teaspoon salt and 1/2 teaspoon monosodium glutamate; invert the top of the double boiler to cover the asparagus tips, then boil 20 minutes or until the thick green portion is fork-tender.

"A clever method, Madame. The tougher lower stalks become tender in the boiling water, while the delicate tops cook gently by steam without becoming overdone."
