Students Support Fellows In U.S.A. And In Algeria

OTTAWA (CP)—The status of students in other countries will form the basis of resolutions to be presented to the national congress of the National Federation of Canadian University students later this week.

On this third day of a five-day conference, a study group on international affairs supported recommendations backing the United States national student federation in its support of integration and pledged support to Algerian students in their struggle to complete their education.

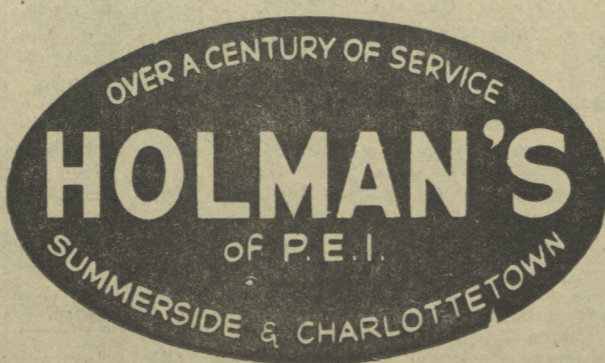

The recommendations will be brought before the 100 delegates to the general congress Thursday. PLAN PROTEST MARCH

The recommendation on integration outlines the Canadian federation's support of the United States National Student Association stand for fully integrated schools. Willard Johnson, a University of California, Los Angeles student working full-time as USNSA's international affairs vice-president, said that later this month eastern U.S. students will march to Washington, D.C., to see President Eisenhower to protest against the closing of schools and the opposition to integration displayed particularly in Virginia and Arkansas.

The study group also approved a recommendation to help Algerian students who have been victims of the political situation between France and French Algeria.

The NFOCUS recommendation would provide for moral support to the students and also provide token financial assistance to help students continue studies elsewhere.
