

Red China Expert Foresees Danger If Recognition Given

OTTAWA (CP) — Diplomatic recognition of Red China by Canada would be looked upon by the Chinese as a "perilous" disintegration of the United States' influence among her "American neighbors," an authority on China said here.

James Stuart Duncan, former head of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission who visited China in 1959 and again in 1964 after which he wrote a book on that country, made the statement to the Canadian Club here.

He said the Chinese view Canadians as satellites of the U.S. and "our adopting a policy so contrary to theirs" would be interpreted as a loss of U.S. influence.

It was probably "regrettable" that Canada did not recognize China as England did in 1949 "when her successful revolution gave her a clean-cut mandate to govern." But since this was not done he was opposed to adding to "U.S. difficulties by doing so now."

Recognition of China in 1949 or today "would bring us no worthwhile advantage... China will buy from us the things she requires and no more."

EXCHANGE NEEDED
Canada should continue to develop friendly relations with Red China and extend exchanges of press representatives, professors, students, trade missions and "gradually help to break down the misconceptions and misunderstandings which separate us."

Man tse-tun, Red Chinese leader, had readily accepted aid from the U.S.S.R. but "never had any intention of playing second fiddle to Moscow."

It was "too late" when Khrushchev began to realize in 1957 that "they were building a Frankenstein" and began to withdraw aid "particularly in sensitive areas of scientific development such as nuclear science."

China was able to carry on scientific and industrial development unaided. She then made "an error of historical significance" in 1960 by attempting what she called a "great leap forward" by relegating agriculture to second place behind industry. Agricultural production had dropped to one-third of 1959 estimates.

When Mr. Duncan left China in 1964 food production had climbed to rates above pre-depression figures but industry "had not yet regained its 1958 levels."

China's development in metallurgy, radar and instrumentation was noteworthy. Knowledge and understanding of nuclear science "has progressed far beyond earlier appraisals."

Mr. Duncan doubted that Sino-Soviet differences could be resolved. It was more likely they would deteriorate further.

Taiwan, U.S.-backed seat of the Nationalist Chinese government, "is like a beacon of light in Asia" giving hope to all Asiatic and African nations. It was the "most successful example of American aid and counsel combined with autocratic but able and honest government."

Under no circumstances could the U.S. go back on its treaty with the Nationalist Chinese "without besmirching irrevocably her world image and bringing about a crisis of confidence of world-shattering dimensions."
