MR. AND MRS. CARL FORRESTER

Summer Marriage Vows Exchanged At Galt, Ont.

White and yellow mums and white gladioli provided an attractive setting in St. Ambrose RC Church in Galt, Ont., for the June wedding of Mary Patricia Anne Campbell of Galt to Carl Ivan Forrester, also of Galt. Guest pews were marked with white satin bows and blue and yellow mums.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter C. Campbell formerly of Charlottetown, P.E.I. and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. David Forrester, 139 Hespeler Road.

Rev. Father V.A. Pautler officiated at the high noon double ring ceremony and the bride's cousin, Father P.L. Campbell occupied the sanctuary. Soloist Mrs. Lawrence of Galt sang Panis Angelicus accompanied by Mrs. Jackson.

Given in marriage by her father the bride was wearing a floor length gown of imported Alencon lace. The bodice was styled with sabrina neckline and long lilypoint sleeves and the bouffant tiered skirt enhanced with spatterings of iridescent sequins, swept into a chapel train. The attendants wore identically-styled dresses of brocaded peau de soie. The bell-shaped skirts had a double pleat in front and back. The maid of honor wore pastel blue, the bridesmaids, gold and the little flowergirl, white. They wore wedding-ring headdresses to which were attached shoulder-length veils and they carried bouquets of tangerine roses and yellow carnations with a tangerine fleck.

Best man was Gerald Solonik of Preston and ushers were Emmett Campbell, Edmund Campbell, Eric Campbell (all brothers of the bride) and Thomas Forrester, brother of the groom. Junior usher was Allan Stewart.

For the reception in the Knights of Columbus Hall the bride's mother wore a street-length dress of organza and lace in deep pink shade. The dress was styled with controlled skirt, sabrina neckline and threequarter sleeves. She wore white accessories and corsage of white gardenias.

LAC. GILLIES A. AND MRS. O'NEIL

St. Peter's Church Adorned With Mums And Carnations

St. Peter's Church, Seven Mile Bay was the scene of a pretty military wedding recently when Dianne Mary Emily MacLellan, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy MacLellan, Borden, became the bride of Lac. Gillies A. O'Neil, son of Mrs. Alma O'Neil and the late Arthur O'Neil of Dorval, Quebec.

Reverend Reginald F. MacDonald performed the double ring ceremony and celebrated the Nuptial Mass. Rev. Arthur Pendergast was present in the sanctuary.

Baskets of red carnations and yellow and white mums adorned the altar. Guest pews were marked with lily of the valley and fern and tied with white satin bows.

Sister Mary Jude, organist, accompanied St. Stanislaus choir of Kinkora who sang hymns during the Nuptial Mass. and Mrs. Arthur MacCarville who sang during the signing of the register.

The bride, given in marriage by her father was wearing a floor length gown of white silk organza over layers of net and satin. The fitted lace bodice featuring a scalloped neckline enhanced with cup sequins and simulated pearls, was fashioned with lily point sleeves and the full skirt was highlighted by chantilly lace appliques. Her matching full length train of chantilly lace was edged with white silk organza. A tiara of pearls and crystals held in place her shoulder length bouffant veil of French illusion tulle. She carried a cascade of red and white carnations with streamers of Ily of the valley and fern. Her only jewellery was a pair of pearl earrings, a gift from the groom.

The maid of honor, Marjorie MacKinnon, cousin of the bride, wore a frock of yellow silk organza over taffeta, with short sleeves and scooped neckline, and the ballerina length skirt featuring a chantilly lace front panel. She wore a matching headdress and carried a nosegay of white and yellow carnations.

The bridesmaids were Shelvie Bell and Betty Campbell, who wore identical gowns of pink silk organza over taffeta, having the same styling as that of the maid of honor. They carried nosegays of white and pink carnations.

Marleen Grant, as flower girl was dressed identically to the maid of honor and carried a small nosegay of white and yellow carnations. John Mark Arsenault acted as ring bearer.

The groom was attended by his brother Roger. Lac. Gilles Tremblay and Lac. Claude Labonte ushered the guests.

The bride's mother chose for her daughter's wedding a pink alencon lace over taffeta sheath dress with matching jacket and hat, white accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

The groom's mother was dressed in a two piece blue silk jersey suit with white accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

Following the wedding a reception was held in the Lions Community Centre, Albany for 85 guests. A three-tiered wedding cake topped by a miniature bride and groom centered the brides table and was flanked by tall tapers in silver candelabra and bouquets of cut flowers.

Rev. Austin Bradley as master of ceremonies called upon Russell Deighan to propose the toast to the bride. The groom responded. Other speakers were Rev. R. F. MacDonald, Arthur MacCarville, Joseph Murphy, Ralph MacLellan, uncle of the bride, and the bride's father.

Sheila MacLellan, cousin of the bride, circulated the guest book.

Mr. and Mrs. O'Neil honeymooned in U.S.A. and Quebec. For travelling the bride wore a three piece yellow and white double knit suit with white accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

Out of town guests included the groom's mother Mrs. Alma O'Niel, and brother Roger of Dorval, Quebec, Urban MacLellan, uncle of the bride and sons David and Philip of Cambridge, Mass.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Fabric Of Moonlight Lies Over The Valley

Now the Lady Moon spreads a pretty fabric over the farmlands: on the fields and groves, on the hills and in the low dip of the valley, where singing a sweet lullaby, brooks, touched here and there by moon-silver, run down to some sea...

The fabric is of gossamer substance, like, we think, the sheerest material we know: that of bridal veils and the tulles and chiffons and voiles of beautiful gowns that were. A fairy stuff such as Queen Mab wears — the same as that of the butterflies' wings, that flit through these summery days.

Moonlight is fashioned from the same web as starlight, and the soft shadows of twilight that creep in gently over our hilltops; or the dawn-glow, which breaking hastily, grants us, despite our sins and sinnings, a fresh beginning in another new day. The same, but even more magic is the moonlight in its quiet sheen — its light and shadow over all.

"I'm thinking" Papa Starling smiled this morning from his high terrace on the garage-roof, noting the ripple of the wind's stirrings in haylands up the rise, "farmers will have no cause to complain over today's weather. It has been especially made for them!"

"But there were those weekend showers" the thought came.

"This is a good day!" Mack called in a happy greeting from the tank in the yard, where he pumped gas into the tractor. "It's going to make a hayday shortly!"

On the lawn nearer us Alex and Peter were engaged in fashioning a wigwam from a green blanket they had borrowed from their mother. They draped it over a low limb of willow, Scampie watching them with an approving smile. "That's how it goes!" Peter remarked, standing back the better to survey it.

"Now which of us will live in it?" Alex questioned.

"I guess I will" Peter smiled.

Alex considered this a moment.

"Oh perhaps" he said, "we'd better both live in it. But mind" he added "no talking. We'll just sit quietly on the floor, and look out the door." "That's the way they do it on TV." Peter nodded. "But" he looked into Alex's face for a sign of approval "we can say 'How' ".

"No, note ven a 'How!' " Alex reminded him sternly.

James was in a piggery, at the feeding there. In the barnyard, the younger farmer carried a bundle of hay to the herd size in the shed...In the near pasture a heifer stopped grazing to allow her calf to nurse. In the paddock by the orchard the pair of ewes and their lambs nibbled the grass-

"There!" we said pinning a pair of James' work-socks, the last items of our little wash in place.

How lovely they are — these July days, which despite their reach from dawn to dusk, spend all too quickly away!

Until tomorrow — — Diary—Good-night.....

MARY HAWORTH

Husband Ignores Family But Wants Wife's Attention

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I do need help. My husband is a good provider and supports us well (three children and myself).

He takes no interest in any home activity or chores. He refuses to help with the yard, which looks awful. He ignores the children and spends his spare time in the pool hall or gets mad if he can't.

I work very hard, tending the babies, keeping the house in order, mowing the lawn, etc., with never an idle moment. I wouldn't mind all this, as I can accept responsibility.

What beats me is that he expects me to greet him at the door with a rush of eagerness, as passionate and seductive as Cleopatra. I keep attractive and try to be a responsive wife. But he can't understand how it is to be tired and why I think he should contribute more to our home life than sex only.

Please help us if you can. We can't afford yardmen or maids; so what do I do now? D.R.

Dear D.R.: Taking objective stock of your problem as stated, it is my conclusion that you are justified in feeling strongly antipathetic to your husband's rather brutally impersonal theory that you should greet his homecoming with the avidity of a starved sexpot.

Possibly he doesn't mean to offend and maybe doesn't even realize that he has. His offensiveness may be due to untaught ignorance and-or cloddish insensitivity as regards the nature of wholesome womankind and the folkways of decent marriage.

In any case, his attitude as described is somewhat morbid, somewhat hallucinatory, as if he steeps himself in daydreams of sex, instead of investing in a realistic fond companionship with his wife. The profane pitch of his expectation desecrates your dignity as a person, also violates your legitimate wifely right to be honored and cherished in the conjugal interchange.

It is his obligation to tenderly woo your response to his sex hunger, instead of assigning you the role of slave or wanton.

Some wit has remarked that the vital difference between a man's wife and his mistress is that his wife, for due cause, may withhold her favor at times without losing status, whereas the mistress does not. The weight of that difference is in your favor in the present instance.

As for how to correct your husband's mistake (if it can be done), I think the remedy would have to begin in your attitude toward yourself.

You must arrive at a clear appreciation of your considerable human worth as a devoted wife and mother, responsible homemaker and hard-working, good-hearted teammate.

When you have assimilated first-rate opinion of yourself, you will operate instinctively from a center of sturdy self-esteem, thus instinctively will turn thumbs-down on any approach that tends to devaluate you, or asks you to be somebody you aren't, especially along lines that run contrary to your true feelings.

So, to sum up, have the good common sense and self-respect to cut out the abject nonsense of trying to oblige your husband's foolish fevered Antony-and-Cleopatra expectations. Be loving-kind as befits the realities of the family relationship. But don't try to function as a flock of hours when your mind rebels, your flesh recoils and your spirit isn't willing.
