CORSET STEELS.

With dealers the buying of corsets is largely a matter of confidence at least as far as the true quality of the boning is concerned.

In order that rusting may be guarded against each bone or steel should be covered before being placed and seen in position in the corset. In ordinary corsets this is rarely done.

The best corsets are fully boned, the cheaper ones are only partially so.

Ordinary corsets are almost invariably boned with cheap, poor quality steel and its cheapness manifests itself in brittleness. In first class corsets specially tempered, high quality spring steel is used, the better the steel the lighter the corset, for in quality is strength. Never buy a light weight corset unless you buy the famous French, tailor-cut, hand-sewed corset, the

All its bones are of the highest quality spring steel and are double covered.

It is the lightest, strongest, most comfortable, most fashionable and best corset made. In all sizes and for all figures $1 to $30 per pair.

THE CONFESSION OF SIN

Father Elliott's Second Lecture Delivered to a Large Congregation.

At St. Dunstan's Cathedral last evening Father Elliott spoke on "The Confession of Sin," and the following is a brief summarization of what he said:

"Does not confession make sin easy? No, concealment makes sin easy."

"Is not confession degrading? No; it is manly. Own up and show yourself a man. Humility is not a degradation. Take your two sons; one confesses his fault to you, the other does not; which is the more manly?"

"But how can a sin be pardoned by merely telling it? God forbid; it is not. Judas confessed his sin. Sin is pardoned by the sacrament of penance, that is contrition, confession and satisfaction for atonement; of these, confession is only a part, and that not the most essential."

"Suppose the sinner is not repentant? The confession is unworthy; the absolution of the priest is of no avail; the sinner is guilty of the heinous sin of sacrilege."

"Suppose he cannot get to confession? Must his sin remain unforgiven? No; we are not required to do that which is impossible. Perfect contrition will suffice in such a case."

"Won't the priest tell? He has not told. There is a higher power that guards the inviolability of the sacred confidence of the confessional."

"Does it not give the priest too much power? It is not his power, private, personal; it is official, deputated, the power of Christ (2 Cor. 2-10; 'If I forgive anything... for your sakes forgive I it in the presence of Christ.')

"Is money needed for confession? No; hardshell sinners would rather pay to be released from the obligation of confession."

"Suppose I say I will confess direct to God? Suppose you said you would pay your taxes direct to the governor? We must secure pardon of our sins by the methods designated by Christ."

"The primary want of man's heart, when moved by any strong impulse of feeling, whether of joy or of surprise, or of guilt, is expression."

"Man has power to commit sin, but he is powerless to conceal it; and the first effort of the soul to relieve itself of the weight of sin is an open confession. 'An open confession is good for the soul.'"

"Confession is a natural instinct, and on this instinct is based the common saying, 'Murder will out.'"

"Sin, like poison, cannot be concealed, and the only outlet of the guilty conscience is confession."

"The human heart seeks to unburden itself to one who has the sympathies of a friend, one who not being exempted from human weakness, can have compassion on its miseries."

"Surely religion should take in its scope these strong inclinations of the soul. Christ was such a friend to the sinner when He walked upon the earth; He was full of compassion and tenderness towards sinners, forgave them their sins, and bade them sin no more. Can it be that Christ came down from heaven to walk among men for only a few years, and then withdrew with all His powers and gifts to an eternal silence, leaving man as wretched alone in his sins, misery and wretchedness? Or did He communicate His powers and gifts to them, to be employed by them as His representatives in the salvation of mankind until time shall end?"

"The power to loose and bind sin is conveyed in these words by Christ to Peter in the plainest terms, and its exercises by him upon earth Christ pledged to ratify in heaven. Is it not clear from this passage that Christ contemplated the continuance of His work of pardoning sinners through the agency of men, after He should leave the world?"

"Some persons may be disposed to object and say: The pardoning of sins is not expressed in these words of Christ. True enough, but the words, 'Whosoever thou shalt loose,' etc., are ample enough to include the power of forgiving sins, particularly so when you consider that our Lord prefaced these words by promising to Peter 'the keys of the kingdom of heaven.' Christ himself, however, has anticipated your objections."

"When Christ gave the power to forgive sin, He also gave the power to retain sin. There is therefore a question to be decided when the sinner comes for pardon. Shall his sins be forgiven or shall they be retained? The sins of those only who are truly penitent are to be forgiven, and forgiveness refused to the impenitent. It would be a strange pronouncement of forgiveness over a sinner who is impenitent and not resolved to avoid offending God in the future.

"Who invented the confession in the Christian church? Pope? King? Priest? All must confess. Pleasant things can be slipped in unawares, perhaps; but nothing like the duty of confession; so gross an innovation would not have been allowed. Confession was practiced in the church in every age."

The subject to night will be "The Real Presence of Christ in the Eucharist."

Many important questions were answered. The Church was again well filled.
