MRS. EVERETT MacDOUGALL

Weather at Church or an afternoon tea, Mrs. Ralph Bearisto receive many compliments on a mauve all-wool worsted crepe jacket by Aljean. The shot crop jacket has three-quarter ruffled sleeves, and the slim skirt has a kick pleat with arrowheads. The model has chosen white accessories.

Mrs. Everett MacDougall shows the preferred slim line in this white cotton knit t-shirt dress. The banded armholes and the scooped neckline are emphasized by a rib stitch which is carried out in the belt. Mae chose a mauve scarf and large mauve earrings for accent.

MISS SYLVIA BOULTER

MRS. KEITH JOHNSON

Do you look at the fine print? Yes, you do look at this rose tint and you look at Miss Sylvia Boulter in it. The print in a blue can be fascinating and that prettier proof than this luxurious colored cotton saaleen in shades of rose speckled with rosettes of avocado. It features a cuff-flaunts a wide pleated midriff from which fall the tiny unpressed pleated skirt. The pie-shaped neckline, surplice bodice and three quarter sleeves all add up to a dream of a dress. A large black straw coolie, black shoes and gloves accent the design of the dress.

ELLEN'S DIARY

We Tidied The Dooryard How Well It Now Looks

"They're long, these days. It's a farmer coming by this evening on some matter of his farmland offered in the yard, "but I'll be smiling "they're much too short! The trouble is that these ears the cropping seems to come at once. One day it's so cold here's little thought of it... and next, it's here!"

"Are you ready for it?"

"Ready!" he chuckled ruefully the thought. "Off hand, I can think of a dozen things I should first, I've been trying to right now to get the cattle to pasture hay's getting scarce, and I must... Now the burdens of season weigh on-shoulders, and the cares resent their concerns, though always with that fine "onward and upward" outlook, which belongs to the spring.

"Because the voices sound young to him as he walked up the lane Alderlea after dark this evening, what did Jamie find in consequence? Following the sounds their source at the very edge of the millstream were recently Mrs. Lambkins begging to be carried in to shelter from the cool of a night. James still at the barns and the chores there, was much eased at this taken in his eldest grandson of a good husband — man one who can recognize quickly the false notes in the farming world.

May skies were fair and lovely day, the sun warm along the fields. The farmers flocked time on their busy afternoon to attend a while a sale of livestock in another community. And at supper what was going to become the farms with so many farmers retiring or turning to other means of making a livelihood?"

And we thought of the many barns which each morning bears the same other field of work, would the land needs so much. And could not presume to visualize that the farming will be, or community living even a decade ahead, at seedtime and harvest, while we, as we are promised, and for those who will come to them, fruitful fields to till.

We tidied the dooryard this afternoon... leaving it at a whim to come to the house across the lane to look in at a wee lad asleep in his cot... or awake, dark blue eyes (Will they be brown? we wonder) focussing on us we could imagine, though we knew they are yet as unseeing as those of kittens or babes of rabbits even though opened wide and appealing.

"Listen!" we said at dinner when the midday stillness lay about. "Is that the babe crying?"

In the silence we tried to catch the sound again. There it was repeated young and plaintive! James smiled. "It's but a lamb, Ellen" he said, "it's that smaller one of the last twins. It's strayed a little from its mother in the meadow. Hear it again! That's it."

And the May-night that is ours now, listens and smiles and loves the solemn tune the pond pipers play with interesting variations "Down by the old millstream."

Until tomorrow — — — Diary — Goodnight. . . .

Wants Silver Saddle For Her 30th Stampede

CALGARY (CP) — Mrs. June Dewhurst is polishing her palomino ready for this year's Calgary stampede.

Famous for her professional stampee costumes, which glitter with handworked designs in sequins, Mrs. Dewhurst aims to dazzle the spectators with a childhood dream — a $3,500 silver saddle.

Riding the horse Rusty Denver this summer will be a special event for Mrs. Dewhurst, because she will be marking her 30th anniversary in the stampee parade. Back in the 1930s she was riding the trick horse Peanuts and was known to stampee followers for her daring feats.

"SILVER DOLLAR KID"

She began dreaming about the silver saddle years ago, when she met Pete Knight, world champion cowboy, who dubbed her "the silver dollar kid" because she harbored two silver dollars. She continued to save silver dollars until she had 120.

Now these 120 silver dollars are all the saddle with its sterling silver trim, and her initial "D" on the stirrups.

Born in England, she rode in the hunting fields there and came to live with a cousin on the Arthur Stringer ranch here in 1926. She has chosen the Alberta wild rose for the floral design on her embossed saddle.

Her palomino, Rusty Denver, is a favorite in his own right. "Children love Rusty," she says. During stampee week many youngsters clamor to pet him, and through the years of the stampee she has got acquainted with visitors from all over the world.

Mrs. Dewhurst has installed her enthusiasm for horses in her children and grandchildren, who also participate in the parades. Her daughter June, Mrs. Percy Alexander, was runner-up to the stampee queen of 1951, and was picked as the best-dressed cowgirl in 1949.
