Daring Rescue Is Revealed

GLOUCESTER, Mass. (AP)—A 29-year-old Gloucester fisherman's daring rescue in icy Atlantic waters last Monday of a fellow crew member was revealed Sunday when their vessel reached port. Raymond E. Goulart swam fully clothed for 200 feet to snatch from drowning a non-swimming mate, Gerald W. Smith, 24, in heavy seas off Georges Bank, 160 miles southeast of Gloucester.

Goulart's feat was hailed as "one of the most heroic rescues I've ever witnessed" by his skipper, Capt. Freeman Corkum of the scallop dragger Sylvester E. Whalen. Smith, on his first trip to sea, lost his balance and toppled overboard. Seaman tossed a life ring, which he grabbed, but could not get over his head. Running seas carried him off and it was feared he would drown until Goulart plunged in his rescue.

"The good Lord was with me and with that young man," Goulart said.
