USC Executive Director To Address Meeting Tonight

Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova, executive director of the Unitarian Services Committee of Canada, arrived in the province on Wednesday evening, for a brief visit here to promote the work of the USC in the province. This evening Dr. Hitschmanova will be addressing a public meeting at Montgomery Hall at 8.00 p.m.

In an interview yesterday Dr. Hitschmanova spoke of her recent tour of the overseas countries where the USC has been active during the year. The highlight of the USC's oversea activities was the opening on April 28 of a TB Children's Hospital in Mohpt on the Yellow Sea. The USC has agreed to run this model hospital, which will also serve as a public health clinic, for eight years when it will be turned over to the local authorities to carry on the work.

"This, Dr. Hitschmanova said, "is the prime purpose of the USC, to pilot the establishment of various projects, to get these operational, then to turn them over to local authorities to run, and to continue work in another area where help is needed.

She also spoke of the USC's latest operation "Bountiful" the aim of which is to raise $300,000 and to collect clothing for distribution overseas before December 25.

In speaking of the work of the USC in Prince Edward Island, she pointed out that the Island branch has contributed 17,000 lb of clothing in the last year in addition to sewing kits, layettes and other items and that various individuals and organizations in the province support 18 foster children. One of these foster children is supported by Mrs. Fred Osborne. The girl, Dilstina Nongpluh who is now learning to be a nurse, is 19 years old, and Mrs. Osborne has been looking after her needs since she was eight.

"Prince Edward Island is unique", Dr. Hitschmanova said, in the way that the USC branch is helped by so many different organizations, such as the Women's Institute."

The topic of Dr. Hitchmanova's address tonight will be "Building Bridges" and she will also be showing a film on her USC tour.

While in the province she will be addressing the Charlottetown Junior Board of Trade and the Summerside Business and Professional Women's Club.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Fruits Of Summer Are Preserved For Winter

The chrysanthemums in the flower-bed are pretty now! Granddaughter offered when she returned this afternoon from her classes, putting down her books on the kitchen-table. "I stopped there just now, trying to decide which of them was my favorite. But they're so lovely — all of them, that I couldn't choose!"

We were preserving plums at the time — by the canning method — and had reached that stage of it, where one keeps an ear to the pan in which the tins bath, to note the exact minute the water commences to boil. Plums preserved thus, particularly the golden varieties are a favorite preserve of the family, the pleasant tang lending an interest to any flagging appetite when served in less summery days.

The sound of hammers from the out of doors intermingled with those of the kitchen. It is a sound of farm we like to hear, indicating, as it does, some work of repair or other improvement being effected about.

It happened that James and the younger farmer, with Mack at his schooldays close, were repairing a building in the yard. It had come there, it seemed to us, magically, through the morning; come across the fields between, and down the farm-lane, from another farm of the name, where it had remained more or less useless for some years.

"Now what's this?" we queried, coming then to inspect it. "Ask your husband" Jamie said.

James grinned boyishly .... There continues to be perfect accord between, James, his sons and grandsons, I believe them! Each endeavour of the farm is taken up with interest, and the minds and hands that further it, are always alert and willing.

"We intend it for a granary" the younger farmer volunteered.

"A mobile one" Jamie smiled. "Like they used to have in the West!"

"Well, we did consider using it in the fields" James nodded. "It's not big, but it would hold quite a few bushels— yes, it would come in handy there" he said.

"It would make a fine dressing-room up on the pond at the Corner this winter" Gage commented on a light note. "Yes, put a stove in one corner, scatter a few benches around — think how nice that would be!"

"Mind on hockey" James observed "and our granaries empty and the fall coming on! A right good farmer, you'll make. Off playing hockey, and your cows at home licking bare mangers" he twinkled.

"Full cows!" Gage grinned.

Friday, this. A day of welcome sunshine. And the night puts moonlight over all.

"We must get the binder out in the morning James said this evening looking off to the harvest-fields.

"Oh dear, things are not what they were" Granddaughter comments with a sigh and a smile, as she picks up now to go to bed. "Time was when I could stay up quite late if I wished. But not now! Nowadays my morning comes early!"

Until tomorrow— Diary — Good-night...
