ELLEN'S DIARY

Early Morning Sunrise Brightens Farm Kitchen

"Who will be our first visitor of the new year, Ellen?" James considered our query as we breakfasted this morning. He had not risen then, so I only above the fire, clad in billows, to pattern brightly a wall of the kitchen. Cool we knew the outdoors was, indeed it was such a day as encouraged one to partake of a warm and nourishing meal, before going out to the demands of his hours.

"Oh we never know," James said, setting his cup of tea, by his plate.

"Let's hope whoever comes, be, or she, will bring us a lump of coal!" we offered with a chuckle.

"For good luck!" we said. While James is among the most cheerful of men, he never gives to chasing after mirages, he nevertheless is not so much as a child, he is a man of time signs and tokens. A rusted horseshoe or a four-leaf clover, he would not pass by without blessing the finder: a babe with two crowns is sure to "irradiate" far: four right arms crossed in greeting, or in parting, will mean the making of an eligible one participating. And we think, should it be so, he will be the first to see this, he will try to try the sumter at its birth. Indeed it was such a day as encouraged one to partake of a warm and nourishing meal, before going out to the demands of his hours.

MARY WORTH
Wife Is Painfully Aware Of Flirtatious Behavior

Dear Mary Worth: I have been married six years and have three lovely children. I persuaded him to attend AA meetings referring to me as "mommie," people he thought were "out," then quit cold.

I persuaded him to see our family doctor, who gave him encouragement and medication. After a few visits he stopped going.

Next we went to a mental health clinic and after several talks, after which they said us together. He was to go to a hospital for a few days. When I joined a church, hoping he would attend (though he wouldn't), he went to a hospital. Recently I met a young man, wholesome, intelligent, in a way, who seemed to encourage me, I am drawn to him like a magnet. I think of him constantly in romantic day-dreams, imagining we are having an affair. I may make a somewhat snap out of it. Such a thing would disgrace me, but I am a woman, I am worthy mother. Please answer quickly.—V.P.

Dear Mary Worth: I am married to an alcoholic. We have three children. He is in a perpetual fog when he isn't working. I am disgusted and repelled by his touch. I can hardly stand the sight of him. My five years of sympathy,

BRISTOL

The recent wind storm toppled two of the many storage tanks of the Irving Oil Company near the old village school. The crane and the crane operator for quite a distance, and many thought it was a bomb blast. The crane operator was killed by the high winds that ran far into the air from their lofty platform. It will be quite a task. Machinery for the job has been ordered to the site and bulldozers are clearing the field for the task.

During high winds, a 10 ft. storm the roof of the large barn on the farm of John Macdonald, who has owned it since he was a boy, was blown away. The barn was recently destroyed. The destruction is quite a loss to Mr. Macdonald, especially at this season of the year when the estate have to be housed.

Still another barn on the property of the late James J. Macdonald, the old home of Father Reginald Macdonald was torn to splinters by the wind. The barn was blown away in all directions. Several other small buildings were blown to bits. The wind was reported away in the field near the farm buildings.

Bristol mourns the passing of one of its most respected residents, in the sudden passing of Father Reginald Macdonald, a heart attack. Mr. Sinnott received here all his life, except for a short period in the United States. He was a member of the Holy Name Society, and his wife, the former Margaret O'Brien, they raised a family of five children.
