
SOURIS IS BUSY PORT

The port of Souris was a hive of activity this past weekend. In addition to the laker "Frankcliffe Hall" loading pulpwood on the north side of the government wharf, and several draggers tied up at the Eastpack wharf, the above group of American and Nova Scotian draggers were berthed on the south side of the main wharf. Included in the deep sea fishing craft tied up at Souris were the following: Virginia Ann, David Frances, Linda and Jane, Donna May, Northern Star, Souris II, Paula Marie, Harry G., Donald and Eugene, Marjorie and Marybelle, Irene R., Donna Rae, and Beotbok. Coasters in port included the "Cathelia," St. John's, Nfld., loading general cargo for St. John's; the "Orel," Souris, loading general cargo for Fortune, Nfld.; the "Bessie M. Dugan," Murray Harbor, and the Flozald II, Grindstone, M.I., each loading cordwood for the Magdalene Islands.

MACKEREL WERE RUNNING

The week before last inshore fishermen enjoyed the best mackerel fishing they have had so far this season. Big catches were reported from all important harbors on the North coast. Red Head, located on the south side of St. Peter's Bay near the entrance was no exception. Some boats located at this harbor a few miles north of Morell village averaged almost 6,000 lbs. of mackerel daily; one single-manned craft hand-lined 1,900 lbs of the tasty deep water denizen in one trip to the fishing grounds. In the week the Morell Packing Co. processed almost 200,000 lbs. of the silvery fish.

In the photo above taken at a Souris plant, fall mackerel are being filletted, salted, and placed in large temporary containers. Later they will be packed in large puncheons where the final stage in the curing process will be completed.
