NEWS BY TELEGRAPH.

MANCHESTER, Sept. 25.

A Manchester despatch to the "Guardian" from London says it is reported that Lord Cranbrook has been summoned from Baltimore and Lord Salisbury from Dieppe, to meet Beaconsfield and decide on a response to the request of the Indian Government for permission to send intimation to Shere Ali. Beaconsfield was in town all Tuesday in active correspondence.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 25.

The International Sunday School Committee met at Gibson House this morning for the purpose of providing International Sunday School lessons for seven years, beginning with 1880.

BERLIN, Sept. 25.

The Parliamentary committee continued the discussion of the Socialist bill to-day and adopted several Liberal amendments, despite the opposition of the Conservatives. Count Von Elenberg spoke against one of these amendments, but was unable to defeat it.

PRAGUE, Sept. 25.

The Deputies belonging to the old Czech party, who for ten years abstained from participating in the proceedings of the Bohemian Diet, yesterday took seats and made declaration that, while adhering to their former protests, they were willing to make efforts to obtain their ends by conciliatory methods.

NAPLES, Sept. 25.

The volcanic activity of Vesuvius continues to increase. The crust of the cone has given way, and a new cone is forming.

LONDON, Sept. 25.

A despatch from the southern mouth of the St. Gothard tunnel reports that three cases of gunpowder for blasting exploded to-day. Ten workmen were killed and several terribly injured.

ATHENS, Sept. 25.

The journals announce that 800 Turkish troops attacked a body of insurgents at Aspida, Thessaly, and were repulsed with a loss of 40.

VIENNA, Sept. 25.

The Presse announces that the Austrians occupied Zwornik, having met no resistance.

ROME, Sept. 25.

Jacob Erdan, a French journalist and author, is dead.

Italy is authorized to deny the report of the presence of Italian volunteers on the Austrian frontier.

PARIS, Sept. 25.

Patrie says the difficulties between France, England, and the United States, relative to the Newfoundland fisheries, have been arranged. Three Cabinets are now drawing up a convention which will obviate all future disagreements.

ROME, Sept. 25.

The Pope, to-day, in receiving a number of Piedmontese pilgrims, expressed pleasure that the season for pilgrimages has returned, and that the first to arrive were citizens of Italy, a country destined to preserve within its bosom the See of the Vicar of Christ.

He said that efforts were making to root out the faith, but the people of Italy would not allow it to be taken from them. He was confident that the Catholics of Italy would continue their allegiance to the church, because the difficulties of the Pontiff's position are becoming more serious. Devoted sons of the church ought to devise some just and legitimate means for ameliorating this.

LONDON, Sept. 26.

A despatch from St. Petersburg to the Daily News says that Russia will probably not interfere in a war between the Ameer of Cabul and England.

The Oldest Man in the World.

At last the oldest inhabitant has turned up. There is no doubt about the fairness of his claim to this title, and no chance that a rival will soon appear, for this person's age exceeds by half a century even that of old Parr, who is perfectly known to have beaten every other patriarch since the ante-diluvian days. He resides in the Republic of Columbia—a state whose chief products seem to be tobacco, straw hats, monks, volcanoes, and earthquakes—chiefly the last—and he is a half-caste, Miguel Solis by name.

At a recent conference of physicians of Bogota, Dr. Louis Hernandez told how he had interviewed the patriarch. Solis, it appears, is modest enough to claim an age of no more than 180 years, but his neighbors, all of whom, of course, have known him from his infancy, repudiate the notion that he is such a youngster, and loudly assert that he has overpassed his second century.

The oldest inhabitants told Dr. Hernandez that when they were boys Solis had the reputation of being more than a century old, and confirmation of this is said to be afforded by the fact that a signature which Solis recognizes as his own appears among the list of contributors to the cost of erecting the Convent of San Sebastian in 1712, when he was a sprightly infant of 50 or thereabouts. But, unfortunately, as no witness of this interesting signature can be found in the natural course of things, the attestation turns upon old Solis' good faith or his memory, and, without being uncharitable, we may fear that one or the other may be defective.

For the rest, the aged curiosity is interesting enough. Dr. Hernandez found him in good health and at work in his garden. "His skin resembled parchment, and his long snow-white hair was wound about his head in turban fashion. His eyes gleamed so fixedly as to make his visitor feel uncomfortable when looked at." He attributed the length of his life to regular and moderate diet. He eats only one meal a day, but that consists of "strong and hearty food," to which he devotes himself assiduously for more than half an hour at a stretch, having discovered that no man can eat more in half an hour than he can digest in twenty-four hours. But this is not all, for he fasts two whole days every month, and then refreshes himself by copious draughts of cold water, which is probably more stimulating diet in those regions than it is in Europe. Finally, he always lets his food get cold before partaking of it, and he considers that this precaution has had a great deal to do with the prolongation of his life.—London Telegraph.

A Blatant Talker.

Now and then one has seen a fluent and blatant talker, who could not think at any time what could be called thought, but who was able to produce such material as he could produce at all at the rate of rapid speaking trying to inveigle this foolish man to enter with him into the lists of discussion. He did (so to speak) seek to persuade the swan to leave the water where every movement was graceful, and try a walking match on shore, where the swan could but waddle most abominably. I have beheld the swan abandon its proper element, and I have grieved. It is much to be regretted that what George Stephenson (and many other men) called "the gift of the gab" has so powerful and immediate effect upon the less discerning multitude. I have known a human being who was intellectually, morally, and spiritually far beneath contempt, a mere insolent and brutal vulgarian, command the attention of a large meeting by a speech which, when it came to be printed, the stupidest person in that assemblage could hardly fail to see was the most despicable rubbish. I am far from clear that Parliaments and all like bodies are not a mistake. If such bodies are suffered to meet at all, they ought to be constrained to sit for six continuous months, and then the blatant demagogue, unscholarly, insolent, vulgar, and probably dirty, with nothing to commend him but his brazen forehead and his flow of ungrammatical speech, might possibly find his level. A thoughtful man here and there might in these months get over his nervous shyness, and gain the influence due to him; though a soul of fine texture might decline to enter into conflict with the coarse-grained costermonger of debate. Specially, in matters theological and ecclesiastical, it is hard to picture the thoughtful and refined scholar whose writings form the thinking of his generation, as entering into a vulgar brawl with a blustering bully in a horribly unwholesome atmosphere at 2 o'clock in the morning. The scholar would loathe and despise himself for having stooped to that ineffable degradation. The bully would be proud to have even been kicked by the higher type of man.—Fraser's Magazine.

Secretary Evarts lives in great elegance. He has three large residences for the accommodation of his family and friends who may be his guests.

An old Indian who had witnessed the effect of whisky for many years, said a barrel labelled "whisky" contained a thousand songs and fifty fights.

Miss Harriet Hosmer is an inventor as well as a sculptor. She is said to have discovered a new motive power, which she will shortly present to the world.

Mrs. Augusta Evans Wilson lives in a pretty country house near Mobile, surrounded by books, pictures and flowers. She is described as the most charming talker in the South, and as the possessor of a broad, open brow, straight brown hair, earnest eyes, and expressive mouth.

M. C. Desnoyers, Police Magistrate at Montreal, has just been appointed by the Provincial Government a Justice of the Peace for the whole Province of Quebec. His Honor will now be able to invest any of his executive officers with power to serve warrants in any county, district or township in Lower Canada.

Revolutions in San Domingo are of such frequent occurrence that one more or less does not seem to make any difference. It is only a few months ago that Gonzales by a successful revolution succeeded in ousting Baez, who was elected in Dec., 1876, for a Presidential term of four years. Now Gonzales has, after a very short term of office, been forced to give way to De Castro, who is proclaimed President. San Domingo has become by these repeated revolutions a perfect burlesque on the name of a Republic; and its Presidency a prize for the Chief who can command the support of the most soldiers.
