Two Dutch Couples Receive Canadian Citizenship Papers

Mr. and Mrs. Johannes Brink and Mr. and Mrs. Peter Van Schuppen received their certificates of citizenship from Judge J. S. DesRoches and Clerk of the court, J. W. Lavers, at an impressive ceremony held yesterday afternoon at Georgetown.

Mr. and Mrs. Brink, now residing in Summerville and formerly of the Netherlands, sailed from Rotterdam in 1948, landing in Quebec City. They first resided in Little Pond and then moved to Bunbury from where they moved to their present residence which they purchased in 1951. They have an eighteen year old son, Bate, who was born in Holland.

Mr. and Mrs. Brink are engaged in dairying and mixed farming.

Mr. and Mrs. Van Schuppen sailed from Rotterdam in 1949, also arriving at Quebec City and have resided in York, Keppoch and Lower Montague before purchasing their present home in Summerville in 1954. The Van Schuppens have two sons, Jochim, who is 18, and Willem, 15, both of whom were born in Holland.

Mr. and Mrs. Brink were accompanied by Mrs. Van Schuppen on a visit to their homeland during the latter part of 1954.

In his address to the new citizens, Judge DesRoches spoke of the honor they had received as citizenship was not freely granted, but only to those who would make good citizens. He pointed out the fact that they now had the full rights and privileges of Canadians as well as the obligations; that they were free to go about at will; free to worship as they choose; free to travel freely without just cause, and the right to vote.

Judge DesRoches also said he hoped they would enjoy their Canadian citizenship, and warned them that they might have to work hard but was sure they would enjoy a long, happy and prosperous life.

Rev. J. M. Fraser of Trinity Church, Montague, joined Judge DesRoches in congratulating the new citizens.

Mr. and Mrs. Van Schuppen and Mr. and Mrs. Brink were also warmly congratulated by representatives of various associations and Trinity Church groups, which included the Women's Association by Mrs. Lorne Wiginton, the Fraser Fellowship Group by Mrs. C. A. Shaw, the Women's Missionary Society by Mrs. Leon Johnston, Mr. D. R. MacDonald a member of the Board of Stewards, the Legion by J. E. Cudmore, and Mrs. Bert Haneveld, who, with her husband, received citizenship papers in April 1957.

Britain Is Optimistic Of Industrial Production

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP) — Handicapped by the highest rates of interest in 37 years but confident of an increase in industrial production, Britain looks for slightly better economic weather in the next 12 months.

The position now is till difficult, but there are some promising factors, including a trend to lower commodity prices. The wholesale price of basic materials used in manufacturing industries is 3.6 per cent below the total 12 months ago, and import prices generally are at their lowest point for more than two years.

This tilts the international terms of trade in Britain's favor, reduces prices in the shops and helps relieve inflationary pressure.

BRIGHT SPOTS

Other hopeful signs include high coal stocks—production of coal is up one per cent over 1956 —an increasing labor force, virtually non - existent unemployment and official forecasts of good prospects for a continued rise in industrial production, now at a record level.

Production dipped slightly in 1956 from the record level of 1955 but is up 1 per cent in 1957, making the total an absolute high though the rate of increase has been bettered in some previous years. British production now is about 50 per cent above pre-war days.

The Conservative government has moved uncompromisingly to combat inflation.

Chancellor of the Exchequer Peter Thorneycroft, whose April budget contained tax reductions intended as incentives for top executives and businessmen, took a stemer line in October and increased the bank rate from five to seven per cent, highest since 1920-21.

CURBS SPENDING

He also announced a brake on investment spending by government departments, local authorities and nationalized industries, asked the banks to restrict "private sector" loans to industry and instructed the capital issues committee to take a "more restrictive and critical attitude" toward borrowing.

The stiff measures followed strong rumors in August and September, enhanced by France's "little devaluation," that the pound would be devalued. Speculators anticipating such action started a run on sterling which greatly weakened Britain's exchange position. Partly for this reason, Conservative spokesmen called the crisis an artificial one, and stressed the underlying strength of Britain's trading position.

Nevertheless, there were political repercussions over rising prices. In the first 10 months of 1957, the cost-of-living index—described as a fair reflection of a wage-earner's budget — was up 107 compared with 104's in January, 1957, and 100 in January, 1956.

Despite the increases, Britons were earning more, eating more, motoring more and buying more television sets in a year in which Prime Minister Macmillan proclaimed, without much argument, that the people as a whole "never had it so good."

TALKS CONTINUE

On the trade front, negotiations are continuing on Britain's plan for associating herself with the free trade area to be formed around the European Common Market, a project which may be threatened by France's financial weakness. British officials now call it an "industrial" free trade area, underlining their desire to exclude food, tobacco and horticultural products. Some compromise is believed possible between the British viewpoint and that of countries dependent on agricultural exports.

British exports to Canada are rising. Value of goods exported to Canada in 1956 was £177,700,000 compared with £140,800,000 in 1955, and in the first 10 months of 1957 the figure was £164,400,000, promising a further improvement for the whole year.

Hopes are attached to the Canadian trade mission, which made a month-long tour of British industry at the tail-end of 1957, and reported favorable prospects for increasing Anglo-Canadian trade.

At home, there is some concern about maintaining industrial peace. With the government seeking to restrain wage increases, a showdown appeared imminent at one point between employers and organized labor, with the government in the middle, but there were signs that the unions were taking a cautious stand, refraining from decisive strike action as long as possible.

Britain's gold and sterling dollar reserves are strengthened toward the end of 1957. The figure at the end of November was $2,185,000,000, still considered too low for safety.

Rabid Dog Was At College

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — Florida Southern College officials worked into the night Thursday to warn 82 girls known to have been in contact with a pet dog later discovered to have rabies.

In addition letters were being sent to each of the college's 2,000 students and even the dog might have been at places on the campus unknown to the college.

Seven persons are known to have been bitten by the dog, the college said.

The dog died Monday and was taken to a veterinarian for a medical check.

Premiers Are Very Abstemious

TORONTO (CP) — The United Church Observer says the majority of Canada's provincial premiers "are either total abstainers of very abstemious men."

Comments on abstinence from politicians, judges, lawyers and prominent trade unionists range from "I promised mother . . . to "I'm just plain scared of the stuff."

The Observer is the official publication of the United Church of Canada, which makes are contained in an article titled Abstainers Unanimous in the Observer's current issue.

Gershom Mason, a bencher of the Law Society of Upper Canada, says as a boy of 14 "I promised my mother . . . I would have nothing to do with alcohol . . . and I believe it has saved me a great deal of trouble all through my life."

Mr. Justice R. L. Kellock of the Supreme Court of Canada says he was impressed early in life with the risks entailed in the use of beverage alcohol and decided to have no part of it.

C. H. Millard, international director of the United Steelworkers of America, does not regard abstinence as a virtue, especially where there is no personal weakness or temptation.

Monty Calls Trews - Kilt Fight Nonsense

GLASGOW (AP) — Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery suggested Thursday that two British major generals should have their heads banged together.

It was the sharp - tongued Monty's entry into debate over the uniforms of two Scottish regiments—one devoted to wearing the kilt and the other trews (tight trousers).

The argument arose over a merger of the Highland Light Infantry (kilt) and the Royal cots colonels, Maj.-Gen. R. E. Urquart of the Highlanders and Maj.-Gen. E. Hakewill Smith of the Fusiliers, resigned Dec. 4 after a tiuspute with the war office over the uniform to be worn by the consolidated unit. They held out for the kilt. The war office ruled the troops would wear trews.

Montgomery spoke his mind at a dinner for former service men at a hospital in Renfrewshire, near Glasgow.

"I think all this business going on with these two regiments is nonsense," Montgomery said. "You have to understand that the serving officers of these two regiments do understand that a page has been turned in our history. "I think that these retired colonels should have their heads banged together—yes, bang their heads together.

"You have up here a Highland brigade and a Lowland brigade. Both fought with me in the war and I would not like to say which was the better—not here anyway."

Ford Produces 25 Million V-8 Engines

Ford Motor Company has just produced its 25,000,000th V-8 engine — an engine type which experts told Henry Ford a quarter century ago could never be mass produced.

Production in the U. S. of the record engine, an Edsel V-8, coincides with the silver anniversary year of the mass produced V-8.

Ford Motor Company of Canada has paralleled the production strides of the V-8 south of the border. To December 17, 1957, Ford of Canada has built 2,313,644 V-8 engines—more V-8s than have been produced by all other auto manufacturers in Canada combined.

On December 7, 1931, Mr. Ford abruptly halted production of the four cylinder Model B — successor to the famous Model A — and announced he would begin mass production of a car to be powered by the V-8 engine. It would be introduced April 1, 1932. Mr. Ford promised to cast the engine block in one piece. Experts refused to believe what they heard.

ORIGIN

Said an engineer years later about the V-8: "The whole thing was designed out of Henry Ford's vest pocket. Just sketches that he made . . ."

In the foundry, the new V-8 ran into troubles. Hot metal turned the sand to slag in the moulds. Cores shifted out of position and sometimes burned up when the hot metal hit. Blocks cracked and fell apart.

It was not until March 9, with three weeks to go until deadline, that the first good V-8 block came out of the foundry. It was the first time anyone, including Henry and his son, Edsel Ford, knew for sure that successful monoblock casting was not impossible. Other problems remained to be licked, but the V-8 was on its way.

The day came when they got six good engines. Before long, they were making hundreds. On April 1, 1932, nearly every dealer had at least one V-8 Ford on his showroom floor.

A month later — in May, the first V-8 engine was produced by Ford of Canada at Windsor.

Today, the V-8 is the leading engine throughout the industry.
