

The opinions expressed in this column do not necessarily reflect those of the staff of this publication, or of the Student Union.

It is finally here!

This is the last issue of the X-Press. No more picking up the paper each week and slamming it back down again.

We had a successful year again this year. (In other words, we are all still alive!) Although there seems to be a great pile of discontent about the paper out there, don't prejudge next year's paper in our shadow. There will be a new editor next year to reign (or is that rain) over the paper, but his identity is protected for his own safety.

We managed to put out a few issues that were not centred around any one issue. These included our sexual assault supplement, literary supplement, homosexual supplement, and spoof issue. Unfortunately, as the year progressed we became caught up in a whirlwind of opinions focusing solely on one topic. Hopefully, this will be the last week we will ever have to go from one letter to the next hearing one side then the other.

Aside from all that, we did have an enjoyable year. Our army of volunteers surged to numbers unheard of in the past. (It was the pizza!). Next year the paper will be able to build on these experienced and eager soles, to build a bigger and better paper. I don't think I could start to mention some of the names who helped out. Everyone who appears in the "Behind the scenes" page worked hard to try to put out the X-Press each week.

If we can harness some of the writing abilities that were demonstrated in the letters to the editor column, we could have the best X-Press ever.

Short and sweet: The year is over, things will cool down, and we will all enjoy ourselves over the next few months.

Thanks to everyone who helped out with the paper this year and good luck next year.

Bringing the curtain down,

Cory Large

Cory Large
Free Man

EDITORIAL

THURSDAYS
ARE MEXICAN NIGHT

WE'RE SENDING YOU
TO CANCUN, MEXICO

1/2 PRICE DRINKS
TIL 10:30

WIN UP TO $200.00
EVERY THURSDAY

