

Revolutionary Pill Announced Recently

By ROBERT GOLDENSTEIN CHICAGO (AP) — A revolutionary "morning after" birth control pill that can be taken as late as six days after intercourse has been successful in experimental studies, the American Fertility Society has been told.

Progress on scoring a breakthrough with a "retroactive pill" was announced by Dr. John M. Morris and Dr. Gertrude van Wageningen of the Yale University School of Medicine. They said the drugs tested were effective in preventing pregnancy in rabbits, rhesus monkeys and in limited clinical trials with women.

Currently available pills must be taken daily, before intercourse. They prevent the occurrence of ovulation, or release of the egg from the ovary.

The Yale University pill prevents implantation of the ovum, or female sex cell, in the womb. Implantation normally takes place on the sixth or seventh day after the ovum is fertilized by the male sex cell.

"There are plenty of clinical applications for a pill of this type," Dr. Morris said in an interview. "There are the victims of rape, mothers who bring in tearful daughters who have been indiscreet and the world problem of population-control."

The report reviewed six years of research on possible post-coital contraceptives. Dr. Morris, professor of gynecology at Yale, said two "musts" for a post-coital drug are that they be non-injurious to the woman taking them and not produce any abnormalities in the fetus if they are taken too late after fertilization to prevent implantation and later pregnancy.

He said several related drugs meeting these requirements proved successful in the experiments.

Studies on the first such compound were commenced 2 1/2 years ago. The compound, a carboxylic acid named ORF-3858, was effective in rhesus monkeys. However the agent has not yet been approved by the federal Food and Drug Administration for human use.

However, because ORF-3858 has not been approved, Dr. Morris said, initial tests in women were carried out with diethylstilbestrol, a commercially available estrogen.

These trials involved cases of rape and a small number of volunteers. While effective in preventing pregnancy, the estrogenic side effects make this drug undesirable for continued use. ORF-3858 appears to be less estrogenic, and research now is being carried out to separate estrogenic and anti-fertility effects of certain other compounds.

Dr. Morris said in an interview that he would like to see the pill approved for use in women who have been raped, and for women who are unable to conceive.

Strong Winds And High Seas Cut Down On Lobster Landings

Lobster landings were light in most areas of the province yesterday as strong winds and high seas greatly hampered the fishermen and prevented many from overhauling part of their traps.

Fishermen in Alberton and Tignish districts were hauling a pound per trap, which is considered light for first landings.

Lobsters were selling for 60 cents per pound at Alberton Wharf. North Rustico Fishermen's Co-op yesterday reported that 50 boats went to fish. One boat has only 17 pounds of the delicacy from the traps hauled.

Reports from the eastern end of the province indicated many boats did not venture out in the high seas. A few retail outlets in Charlottetown were offering lobster late yesterday afternoon. The price, in some places at least, was 79 cents a pound.

Reports from Georgetown indicate that the starting price will average 45 cents per pound to the fishermen. Last season the price reached 60 cents to 70 cents during the season.

The total catch of lobsters in the province last year was up by over 1,000,000 pounds to 8,837,642 pounds having a landed value of $5,176,544. The industry has 3,200 fishermen engaged, which involves 1,500 boats using 450,000 lobster traps.

Shipments of all manufacturing industries were valued at $31,560,057,000 in 1964, and at $34,079,802,000 last year.

At the end of 1963, the value of unfilled orders was estimated at $2,332,300,000, taking into account seasonal variations. A year later, this figure was $2,725,400,000 and at the end of last year, $3,280,300,000.

Compared with the latter figure, the seasonally-adjusted estimates of unfilled orders at the end of January and February this year showed slight declines, to $3,246,200,000 and $3,275,300,000.

Now, for January and February, the line has become flatter. But economists here don't see this as a particular danger sign for the future of the economy.

With industry generally working at capacity, the time is lengthening between the placing of orders and delivery. This is an important factor in discouraging new orders.

And though official statistics don't yet show the fact, further hesitation is being inspired by government fiscal policy. Finance Minister Sharp's March 29 budget proposed a five-percentage-point increase in the corporation tax rate.

The Western side disclosed it was trying to have the debates held in May despite Communist attempts to postpone them until July.

The 80-minute session in downtown West Berlin was between representatives of the West German Social Democrats and the East German Communists. The Social Democrats said talks will be resumed next week and from them will come an indication of whether further meetings would be meaningful.

WESTERN SOCIALISTS Planning Debates

BONN (AP) — Walter Ulbricht and other leaders of East Germany likely will think twice about accepting invitations to speak in West Germany — they could end up in jail.

West German Socialists are laying plans for debates between East and West German politicians. But it is not clear whether the prospective host, Socialist Mayor Willy Brandt of West Berlin, can guarantee that the Communists will get home safely.

The Communist party has been outlawed in West Germany for a decade and the top leaders of the East German Communist government are accused by the West Germans of ordering front guards to shoot fleeing refugees. They call this plain-murder.

Ulbricht is a familiar and much-hated figure in West Germany. His little spade beard, which makes him look like Lenin, his high pitched voice and his odd Saxon accent are often burlesqued.

Chancellor Ludwig Erhard said earlier this week a visit by Ulbricht is "not desired." Other leaders of his Christian Democratic Party have said more or less clearly that he ought to be arrested.

POLITICS INVOLVED West German party politics plays a role in all this. The meetings are being organized by the Socialists and Communists, both opposed to the Christian Democrats. Erhard has given only grudging approval to the debates because his opponents stand to gain prestige if the meetings come off successfully.

The Socialists have said they would do their best to get safe-conducts for their prospective guests. If they fail, the Communists may call the deal off.

The speakers have not yet been named and Ulbricht may not even intend to come to West Germany himself. More likely he would choose lesser lights. When the names are known something can be done about safe-conducts, the Socialists say.

In Berlin, the East-West negotiators met for the second time Saturday. The Western side disclosed it was trying to have the debates held in May despite Communist attempts to postpone them until July.

The 80-minute session in downtown West Berlin was between representatives of the West German Social Democrats and the East German Communists. The Social Democrats said talks will be resumed next week and from them will come an indication of whether further meetings would be meaningful.
