Legion Meeting

The regular monthly meeting of Morell Branch of the Canadian Legion was held on Thursday with a large turnout of members. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and discussed and the treasurer read a very good financial statement for the month, making all members quite pleased with the progress attained by the branch. The branch is sponsoring swimming classes at Morell and St. Peter's Harbour, under supervision of Miss Sheila DeLory, which is a great move toward the young people of the districts around Morell and vicinity.

Two new members, Comrades Gordon McEwen and Wm. Partridge, were appointed to the Swimming Committee to replace Comrades Fred Blaxland and Arthur MacInnis, who were unable to carry out duties.

Another very important part of the business discussed was the getting of Grade XI in Morell if at all possible. This would be a service to people and children of the area who have to go to Charlottetown for Grade XI. The Legion is willing to give a room of their Legion Home for a class room, and all members hoped this may be achieved for the betterment of Education.

The branch also made a motion to help out the blood donor clinic on August 30. Blood is needed badly, so we hope all people will do their best to aid this clinic. The meeting closed with usual closing ceremony and singing of the Queen.

New Warning Stresses Danger From Radiation; Hazard To Human Race

By MAX HARRELSON

GENEVA (AP)—The atom-peace conference Monday heard a solemn warning that hereditary damage from radiation is potentially the most dangerous of all problems accompanying the extensive use of atomic energy.

Leading experts in genetics agreed that the present danger is not serious, but said precautions must be taken to prevent a threatening increase of radiation.

Prof. Tage Kemp of Denmark, chairman of a session on the effects of radiation on heredity, said there is no doubt radiation causes changes in hereditary processes and that the effect will increase in the future as human beings are exposed to larger doses of radiation.

HAZARD TO HUMAN RACE

If radiation went beyond a certain intensity—which is at present undefined, it would present a "potential hazard to the human race as well as to plant and animal life."

He was not referring to direct damages to the persons exposed but to hereditary changes which would produce a race or a nation "composed of hereditary deficiencies, abnormalities and diseases."

Kemp said scientists have not yet determined the danger "threshold" of radiation but he expressed belief that radiation from present peaceful uses of atomic energy is well below that level.

T. C. Carter of the Medical Research Council at Harwell, Britain's atomic research centre, called for an international study on this subject.

KEEP CONTROL

The scientists all agreed that use of atomic energy for peaceful purposes will and should expand, but that the problem was to find ways to control the intensity of radiation turned loose.

The World Health Organization, a specialized agency of the United Nations, already is studying the problem of radiation and its effects on human beings.

In another discussion panel, scientists examined another side of the hereditary effects of radiation—the beneficial changes being induced into plant life.

Though substantially all the changes brought about by radiation are for the worse, chances are about 500-to-1 that a human or a plant will be improved by the change, according to Prof. A. Gustafsson of Sweden.

MAY IMPROVE PLANTS

Scientists have been able to take advantage of these beneficial mutations to improve agricultural plants.

"We have entered a new phase in plant breeding," Gustafsson said. "We can really start now to re-make plants."

He agreed with another Swedish scientist, Prof. L. Ehrenberg, that many common agricultural
