New and Used Pianos

Things to remember when buying a piano.
A piano is a complicated musical instrument containing thousands of parts. Those made of felt are subject to attack by moths. Strings, tuning pins, etc., easily suffer from rust and wooden parts swell and shrink with climatic changes. The strain on the strings alone adds up to the staggering total of twenty tons, entailing the necessity of heavy steel plates.

When you buy from Miller Brothers Ltd. whether an expensive new Heintzman or a thirty year old reconditioned piano you have the assurance of a lifetime's satisfactory service.

Proper reconditioning of a used piano costs money but pays big dividends over a period of years. The experts who do the fussy work on Miller Brothers pianos have the benefit of really long personal experience plus the knowledge gathered by their predecessors for almost a century.
