

CAMPUS COMMENT

Do you think Canada should resume constitutional negotiations?

I don't think Canadians will be satisfied unless negotiations are resumed. Some agreement has to be reached.

Karen Cain
Arts III

Canadians have expressed their dissatisfaction with the constitutional deal and so it should be put aside until the future. Government should become more concerned with the economy than with the constitution.

Lori Sutherland
Arts IV

We will have to return to the negotiations eventually. There are too many unsettled issues and they won't go away. But I think we need a rest, a long rest, before going back to these issues. Let's focus on the economy for a while.

Steven McOrmond
Arts IV

Although this referendum was supposed to be dealing with one issue, the constitution, it instead became a vehicle for other issues such as the economy and Canadian's confidence in the federal government.

male student
Arts III

Yes, but if we love Canada we should encourage more extensive deliberation on these constitutional changes, less commercialized promotion, more information to get input from the public, and assurance that protection of human rights is legally binding. This is our future; we should be concerned and informed.

Heather Willis
BA, Fifth Year

Huh? What -- (Scowl)
Joel Sutherland
Arts II

Yes indeed kids, it's time for our latest weekly feature addition to the X-Press. In the spirit of that wonderful "Officer Bob Says" from the GEM, it's...

Joel Says!

What will Joel say every week? The choice is yours! Send your submissions in and we'll pick one for print every week. This week Joel says...

Huh?
What?

