A vote of thanks was expressed to Miss Carrie Holman and Miss Vivian Woodside for their contribution in connection with the sale of Miss Holman's book.

Due to the need of a new occupancy by the doctors, this society authorized the hospital to purchase one.

Witnesses

Dr. MacDonald replied that his calls are usually "... to put a man to sleep, not wake him up."—He said that it was a general custom to let the person sleep it off and this could have been the reason why he was not phoned sooner.

Further evidence given by the doctor stated that a person who hemorrhages and receives—the best of care will not necessarily survive. A hemorrhage could occur at any time, even with persons walking to the bathroom.

All the family could see, Dr. MacDonald said was what we could see. He added that they followed the standard procedure by doctoring the black eye.

He said that unless there was a practiced medical examiner available in the house at the time of the incident, he doubted that any of those present could tell that the man they were carrying about would die at any moment.

INTERRUPTED At this point, Mr. Campbell was interrupted by Mr. Justice MacGuigan who said that the defence was going to too great a detail in his examination of the witness, Mr. Campbell replied that he wanted to assure His Lordship, the Crown and those present in the courtroom, that this was a serious offense and specifically noted.

Mr. Campbell and Mr. Justice MacGuigan came close to having a verbal breakdown during the latter stages of the afternoon session when Mr. Campbell objected vehemently to a question directed at Crown witness Ernest MacDonald of Orwell by Crown Prosecutor Nicholson.

After the jury retired, Mr. Campbell stated his reasons for objecting to Mr. Nicholson's question. The objection was sustained.

TEN WITNESSES Ten crown witnesses were heard during the afternoon. All evidence related to events leading up to Ross' death.

Included among the witnesses were Edison Fraser, a store merchant; Charles MacEachern, a truck driver who picked Ross up at Fraser's store on the night of July 26th; John MacDougall, whose house Ross spent most of the night until shortly after 12:30 in the morning; his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Donald MacLeod, visitors at the MacDougall house; Mrs. Frank Vessey, a neighbor visited by Ross prior to his arriving at the MacDougall house, Newman Gill, another visitor to the MacDougall house that evening who took Ross to a spot near his home; Ivan Wood, a close neighbor summoned by Mrs. Ross for help shortly after 5 a.m. on Sunday morning; and Ernest MacDonald.

CAME TO STORE Mr. Fraser said that Ross had come into his store on Saturday, July 26th, shortly before 7:30 p.m. with a list of groceries and after purchasing them went out of the store. He appeared to be in a sober condition at the time.

Mr. MacEachern said that he had gone into the Fraser store and talked with Ross, later offering him a trip home. He said that they took the groceries back to the Ross residence and then sat in the backyard sipping on small bottles of orange extract.

Shortly before 10:30 p.m., MacEachern said that they took the car and went down to a neighbor's, Frank Vessey. He said that Ross went in the house and a former neighbor, Gordon MacDougall who now resides in the States, came out shortly after.

When Ross re-joined them, the three men went over to MacDougall's father's farm, the witness said.

Mr. MacEachern went on to say that he and Gordon MacDougall went down to Wood Islands for the remainder of the evening and when they returned found that Ross had already left for home.

When Ross arrived at the MacDougall house he had two pints of rum. Evidence given by Mr. and Mrs. MacDougall and Mr. and Mrs. MacLeod, indicated that the three men drank one of the bottles and all appeared to be quite normal.

NEW TWIST It was noted that neither of the MacDougalls or Mrs. MacLeod were too well acquainted with Ross but Mr. MacLeod said that he had known the dead

Alberton Council Calls For Additional Ferry

ALBERTON—A resolution requesting a new boat for the Borden - Northville ferry service and a second resolution recommending the paving of the main road from No. 1 highway through Cascumpey to Alberton, Kildare Capes and Tignish, both received unanimous approval at the regular meeting of Alberton Town Council last night.

Mayor Herbert Matthews presided and councillors Jeffery, Campbell and Hardy were in attendance. Bills amounting to $495.27 were approved and ordered paid.

man for 25 years. Mrs. Vessey told the court that she had only seen Ross for about three or four minutes that night. He had come around to see about some work he was going to do and appeared to be in a normal behaviour.

Mr. Campbell cross examined this witness, putting a new twist on the story.

"Ross and MacEachern were sitting for a couple of hours in the Ross yard sipping on a quantity of orange extract," he said, and then after spending a couple of minutes in your house go directly to the MacDougall residence with two pints of rum.

"Do you know anything about that?" the witness was asked. "No," she replied, adding that Ross had not produced any rum while he was in her place.

A slight acquaintance of Ross', Newman Gill, told the court he had gone to the MacDougall residence late that evening. He said that when he left he offered to take Ross home and the invitation was accepted.

It was further noted that the drive to the Ross house took Gill out of his way and he turned around at the cross-roads, some 200 yards from the Ross house.

When asked why he didn't drive right up to the house, Gill replied that "... I didn't think it was necessary," He appeared to be alright.

SHOWS FLASK Mr. Campbell showed the witness a pint flask which Gill testified as being similar to the bottle that Ross had offered him a drink out of and that he had seen in Ross' pocket when he got out of the truck. It was nearly full at the time.

The chief witness for the day was Mr. Wood who lives close to the Ross home and employed Roger MacLean during his holiday time. MacLean had returned home from Toronto only a month previously and was living with his mother and step-father.

Wood said that Roger had arrived on the farm shortly before eight o'clock on the morning of July 26th and had worked right through to four that afternoon.

He said that he (Wood) and Roger had gone to Cardigan and picked up three half-cases of ale (36 cans) and returned to the Wood home just after six o'clock where they had supper.

Accompanying them on their trip to and from Cardigan was a friend, Austin Stuart.

Wood went on to say that Roger took his truck and went home at seven o'clock and returned again at approximately 8.15 p.m. that night. The two then proceeded to Charlottetown where they attended the Legion Carnival on Grafton Street.

He said that they returned home and when they arrived at MacLean's home, they divided the six remaining tins of beer. RETURNS SUNDAY

Wood went on to say that he returned to the Ross house about 5.30 a.m. on Sunday following a call by Mrs. Ross and found Ross lying just outside the door with one foot on the doorstep.

It was noted that there was considerable blood on the ground around Ross' head and over his face.

After carrying Ross into the house and setting him on the couch in the kitchen, Wood said that he washed the blood from the man's face and he and Mrs. Ross applied ice packs to the black eye.

Shortly before leaving at eight in the morning, Wood said that Roger came into the house and when told that his step-father appeared to be in a bad way, the youth turned around and walked out; apparently down the road to where there were a number of machines.

Further evidence given by the witness indicated that he had seen a couple of blood spots on the floor near the kitchen range. He added that Ross was breathing quite heavily when laid down on the couch and extra pillows were stuck under his head to raise it higher.

He said that he next saw Roger at 1.30 p.m. on Sunday for a pre-arranged date to go to Vernon and see about a job for MacLean.

He said that Roger had told him about the scuffle he and his father had had that night. Wood stated that Roger had told him that Ross had thrown a bottle at him and then they had grappled.

KNOCKED TO FLOOR Ross was knocked to the floor and when he got up was knocked
