Fergus, April 6, 1894

To Robert Phillips, Druggist, Fergus.

This is to certify that I have suffered from piles for a long time and tried several articles recommended for this complaint, but none of them benefitted me till I tried Chase's Ointment, which has completely cured me.

MRS. JOHN GEBBIE.

R. Phillips, jr., Druggist Witness.

"My six-year-old daughter, Bella, was afflicted with eczema for 24 months, the principal seat of erruption being behind her ears. I tried almost every remedy I saw advertised, bought innumerable medicines and soaps, and took the child to medical specialists in skin diseases, but with not much. Finally, a week ago, I purchased a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and the first application showed the curative effect of the Remedy. We have used only one-sixth of the box, but the change is very marked; the eruption has all disappeared, and I can confidently say my child is cured. (Signed) MAXWELL JOHNSTON

WHEELS AND WOMEN.

A Certain Way to Win "Health, Happiness and Husbands.

It is, indeed, a mortification to our national pride to have to admit that our English and French sisters "across the pond" have so far passed us in that delightful exercise for women—cycling.

But it is nevertheless true, and not only is it of note that twice as many women ride, but, sadder to relate, they ride twice as well. The reason is not far to find.

Foreign women who are fond of the wheel dress suitably and in their "up to date" cycling costumes are unhampered in their movements and are able to ride well and look well without the agony of mind the unsuitably dressed women here endures, who has to keep asking continually. "Is my skirt right?"

No unbiased and unprejudiced person but must admit that if women are to be cyclists they must adopt a proper dress for the wheel, which the prevailing skirt is not. If we have an assent for this proposition all the rest is clear, for women have to decide for themselves that they will be cyclists, and consequently it is only a matter of a little time when by their innate cuteness and common sense they will, sans facon, hit upon a costume that will be not only suitable but neat and becoming.

There are but few who will not admit that the emancipation is timely, the reform needed and the change one for the better.

Certainly, if one has seen the trim figures of the Parisian ladies upon their wheels skimming along the beautiful driveways in the Bois de Bologne, clad in their "chic" cycling "chic" cycling suits, the answer to "what to wear" seems near a solution if not un fait accompli. The French woman loves comfort and has the nerve to be comfortable. Her wheeling costume is so simple, it is an easy thing for us to copy it without the aid of a Worth or a Redfern.

The good old-fashioned blouse is the favorite waist and over it in cool weather is worn an Eton jacket; the lower part of the costume is a full "divided skirt" that is fastened below the knee by an elastic band in the hem, falling in soft, full folds to the calf of the leg or longer as desired.

The pretty feet and shapely limbs are completely hidden by tan-colored leggings that meet the suit just below the knee and are partly covered by the folds of the goods that fall over them.

The length of the divided skirt in France and England is, to our minds, best described as "short," yes, "decidedly short!" and we are conscious of a breathless sort of feeling at the bizarre sight of seeing a lot of figures fly by without being able to distinguish any perceptible difference between the women and their brother wheelmen.

At home we "can tell a woman a mile off." First there are the yards of flapping skirt, usually hanging all to one side or filled with wind and fluttering like a taut sail, leaving the unfortunate limbs at the mercy of the cold. Next we se the knees working up and down like the great walking-beams on a river steamboat, and the hands must be taken continually from the handle bar in a vain endeavor to keep the awkward-looking knees decently covered.

To all who are unprejudiced enough to admit the need and possibility of a proper reform, the French and English bicycle suits must appeal for favor. Many ladies were seen this past summer in eminently "proper" England, as well as France, who wore divided skirts and no leggings at all. After the first novelty had worn off we failed to even notice it. It seems to be quite time for American women to begin to assert some of their independence, even if they fail to carry it so far.

The combination suit that has been described does not appear in the least immodest, and the leggings are no more objectionable on the women than on the men; the curves of the form are concealed and the entire body properly covered.

There are several erroneous notions regarding the wheel which largely prevent bicycling becoming more general among the fair sex. One is that it requires great skill to ride, and consequently much danger is experienced in learning; another, that it is not worth the trouble and annoyance necessary to master the difficulty of "mounting and dismounting." Both forms of reasoning are illogical. Any woman who cares to learn can be taught to ride, and the difficulties to be overcome are so insignificant, when compared to the pleasure derived from even a single ride, that all those who now decline or hesitate, would do so no longer could they suspect what an amount of pleasure they are so needlessly depriving themselves.

Wheeling is a better tonic than any the doctors and druggists can recommend. In a word, speaking from personal experience, cycling is a delightful exercise for women, a simple and pleasant fresh air cure and one of the best of Dame Nature's remedies. It is a great appetizer, and after a long ride, followed by a hearty meal, which the hungry cyclist has enjoyed to the very last mouthful, there will be no need for "pepsin" or any of its kindred digestive agents.

Health and happiness are twin sisters and go hand in hand. They are inseparable. You will not see one without being able to catch a glimpse of the other. Wealth and beauty are gifts that unfortunately all women will never possess, but the plain girl, if she possess health and its accompanying blessing, happiness, although not an heiress, in a moneyed sense, she is rich, indeed and need envy no one. The charm of a rosy-cheeked bicycle companion is more enduring than the pale prettiness of a ball room belle.

Men, if they are foolish enough to admire girls with languid eyes and pale faces, are seldom foolish enough to marry them. Without exception, all men desire to marry well women, and there are very few things men as a rule object to more than spending their money on doctor's bills and druggist's prescriptions. A healthy young woman be a cheerful and contented mate, not only insuring her husband's but her own happiness. Cycling, as a means of obtaining robust health and strong, firm muscles, should not be neglected by any woman, married or single, who desires to be, what God intended she should be, hale and hearty.

It is no longer necessary for the Prince in the fairy tale to try his ladylove's patience, or the lack of it, by giving her a tangled skein, for cycling will much more surely disclose her true disposition

KITCHEN OF A BIG HOTEL

MYSTERIES OF TURNING OUT AN ELABORATE BILL OF FARE.

The Chef's Organized Corps—Buying the Enormous Food Supply and Cooking it According to a Thousand Recipes.

Hotel kitchens are a deep mystery to most people who glance over the long menu three times a day and wonder where all the dishes come from, and how they are prepared so that they can be had at a moment's notice. They do not consider that cooking for a houseful of guests requires an army of workers below stairs, a minute system and studied generalship on the part of the managers, who daily produce enough cooked food to feed the population of a fair-sized town.

There are two great men in the lower section of the big modern hotel. One of them is the steward and the other is the chef. The first supplies the raw provender, and the other gives it the artistic treatment which later on soothes the appetite of the guest into dreamy satisfaction.

The steward is a keen business man who watches the markets as closely as a professional stock speculator. At night he makes a list of what he is to buy the next morning. The list would read like a bit of fiction to the average housewife. It is the regular thing for the steward of one of the new Fifth avenue hotels to buy each morning twenty-five different kinds of fresh fish, fifteen sorts of shellfish, ten of smoked and salt fish, twenty-five varieties of meats, and the same number of butcher's miscellanies, such as sweetbreads, calf's head, etc.; fifteen varieties of game, thirty-five of vegetables, a dozen of fruit and a like number of cheeses.

A number of smaller items are also bought each day, such as olives, jellies, syrups, milk and eggs. There are regular days for the purchase of vast quantities of groceries, but these give the steward compartively little trouble, as they require no skirmishing about to secure. An order is sent by telephone or messenger to the wholesaler, and the goods are delivered.

Great care is taken in the purchase of milk, butter and eggs. Four of the large fashionable hotels pay a contract price of $1 a pound the year round for their butter, and this item alone costs each of them in the neighborhood of $90,000 a year, including the cooking butter.

None of the milk supplied to these hotels is of the skimmed variety. It is bought by contract from large dealers and from each can is taken enough to fill a small glass jar, which is at once placed in a refrigator at 45 degrees and kept locked up for twenty-four hours. At the expiration of that time it is tested by an expert to discover the exact proportion of cream and milk. The season of the year has much to do with these proportions, which for the cream vary from 12 to 22 per cent. If the cream falls below the minimum the dealers stands the immediate danger of losing a fat contract.

Eggs are a tender subject with the large hotel men and the steward invariably buys the cosdliest in the market. An egg of bad character may lose for the hotel one of its best patrons, and may indirectly cause others to change their quarters, as the man who eaves on account of a disreputable egg is sure to tell about it. Not only that, but it has the power to ruin scores of dollars' worth of dainty pastry, gallons of puddings and custards, and generally do untold damage.

All the eggs not boiled to order are broken separately by skilled assistants, making the cost of handling them a considerable item. Two hundred and fifty dozen is an average number used each day in a large hotel, and at busy times as much as 500 dozen have been handled. Breaking and judging 6,000 eggs in a day is no small task, as can easily be imagined.

The ultra-fashionable hostelries use English mutton to the almost complete exclusion of the American product, although immense quantities of the latter are daily exported to England. It is the proper thing to call for English mutton chops, although it takes a skilled epicure to distinguish their delicate flavor. The sheep there are kept more carefully and the fattening process is slower and more painstaking. It would be an easy matter for the hotel man to furnish American mutton when English is ordered, as not one guest out of fifty would recognize the fraud, but hotels that pride themselves on their cuisine dare not practise such a deception.

All the meat used is treated with artistic care, and the "ripening" process requires the judgment of an expert. When purchased it is ticketed with the date of killing and the dressing, and is then packed in a cold room at 45 degrees for two weeks. When removed it is usually covered with a thick mould, and the appearance of this mould to the expert is the keynote of its condition. It must be ripe, juicy and tender, and the long storage usually brings about these results.

The real work of the kitchen falls to the lot of the chef. In four of the greatest New York hotels the chef is an Alcatian, and his salary ranges from 15,000 to $10,000 a year. He has a number of department chefs under him and each of them has a small regiment of helpers.

The next in rank to the chef is the saucier, who boils the meats and mixes the soups and sauces. After him comes the rotisseur, who broils and roasts all the meats and fish. Following the rotisseur is the entremetier, who handles all the side dishes, such as vegetables, omelettes and whatever is fried. The garde a manger, next in rank, makes the salads and prepares the cold meats. The boucher, who cuts the meats, and the poissonier, who dresses the fish, and the casserolier, who fills the important post of head pot-washer, complete the executive force of the chef.

With a well-organized staff of assistants the main duty of the chef comes just before mealtime, when he makes a round of the entire kitchen, tasting every article prepared. He may suggest some slight change, like the adding of seasoning, but usually everything has been done to his satisfaction. The bakery force is independent of the chef.

A description of the fittings of one of these kitchens would fill a volume, and were the technical terms used it would be wholly unintelligible to the average good housewife. The equipment of an up-to-date hotel kitchen costs close to $100,000, and the yearly expense of keeping it in fine running order is equivalent to the income of a millionaire.—New York World.

Don't Make Any Mistake

When you are threatened with consumption or lung troubles and get the wrong kind of Emulsion. There is only one perfect, pleasant and effective preparation of that life giving substance and it is Miller's Emulsion. There is no bad taste to this preparation. It is compounded on an entirely new principle, by which the vital energy of the Liver of the Norwegian Cod Fish is retained and incorported with the hypophosphites of lime and soda, making the most potent blood maker known to science. It has saved thousands of young lives, and is revolutionizing the old methods of consumption treatment. Miller's Emulsion is the great nerve strengthener and blood maker, and cures Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Scrofula and all Lung affections. In Big Bottles, 50c and $1, at all Drug Stores.

SATISFACTORY REPLIES.

A Marked Increase in sale of the New Specific Remedy.

DETRIOT, Michigan, May 20.—City druggists here report a great number of enquiries with regard to the specific remedy for Brights disease, diabetes and all forms of kidney complaint, known as Dodd's Kidney Pills. A partial investigation has shown that in every case the reply of the druggists to the questions of their customers has been highly landatory to the remedy and that they have been able to cite many cases from their own personal knowledge were the most signal benefits have been derived from its use. The result has been a very marked increase in the number of sales made and several unusually large orders have been given.

"Yes," remarked the telephone girl, as she gazed at the waves and wondered what their number was. "I am connected with the best families in the city."—Indianapolis Seutinel.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ar.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."
