In loving memory of my dear Mother, Mrs. Bessie Parkman, who departed this life October 12th, 1951.

Two years has passed since that sad day,
In which the one I loved was called away,
I loved her then, I love her still,
Forget her no, I never will.

Fondly Remembered by Her Daughter Julia J. Sentner.

IN MEMORIAM
In loving memory of our dear Grandmother, Mrs. Bessie Parkman who departed this life October 12th, 1951.

Dearest Grandmother how we miss you,
As it dawns another year.
In life's family album
Is a picture we hold most dear.

'Tis a picture of you dear Grandma Who were always so good and just
And when life's journey is over, We know you will be waiting for us.

Sadly Missed and Always Remembered by Her Granddaughters, Mary Darte and Ruby Larter.

IN MEMORIAM
In loving memory of my dear
departed this life October 12th, 1951.

Dearest Mother how I miss you,
As the years roll slowly by Some day I hope to see you,
As we meet on that Golden Shore.

Beautiful memories she left behind, Always was so loving and kind.
Just right and true to one another It was a pleasure to have called you "Mother."

Always Remembered by Her Son

Thoughts For Our Time

THE CONTEMPLATIVE LIFE

There has been in our nervous, highly industrialized culture the tendency to recognize man as above all a "maker" and a "doer"— an attitude which has been termed "activism."

It is true, of course, that man must act, must make and do—it is a condition of human existence. It does not complete the human picture, it does not exhaust the inner possibilities and needs and, indeed, obligations of human nature.

Man lives within a tissue of relationships, all of which must be maintained in proper balance and tension for the complete fulfillment of what he is. Man is related to the external world, first of all;
and relative to it he is a "maker", exercising artistic ability. To be a maker is of the essence of his humanity, living in and dominating as he does a material world full of possibilities waiting for the exercise of human intelligence and skill.

By artistic activity we do not mean the activity of the artist taking in the narrow sense of the word, but that activity, whether useful or not, whereby man impresses his rationality upon matter, be it in a painting, or in a house, or in a jet engine. The artistic activity of man the "maker" is necessary, not only to his own individual fulfillment, but to the needs of human society as well. These needs are obvious, and no one questions seriously the necessity of the "artistic man" (in the broad sense) in society.

But man is not only related to external things. More profoundly there is within himself something to be achieved his completion of himself precisely as a man, the establishment of inner stability and harmony. This is the plane of what we might call moral activity, the activity proper to man as a "doer." It is now no longer a question of making things out of external matter, but of becoming something, of being something within himself. (We must, of course, realize that there is something arbitrary about these divisions, they have very intimate relationships with one another. But such divisions are necessary for a preliminary understanding and may, perhaps, be excused on that score.)

The establishment of order within the individual, and so, of course, by diffusion, within human society as well, of such is roughly the accomplishment of man the "doer"; for the province of man as a moral being. Certain fundamental moral habits or virtues are obviously necessary for the perfection of man and human society, quite apart from his status as a completely re-
