FRUITS FROM JAPAN.

FINER PEACHES, PEARS AND PERSIMMONS FROM THE MIKADO'S LAND.

Dates, Oranges, Quinces and Nuts—A Wonderful Variety of Edible Luxuries, Some of Which Are Now Grown in America.

The Department of Agriculture has recently acquired a collection of Japanese fruits—counterfeits, that is to say, executed most artistically by the Professor of Horticulture in the University of Tokio. This gentleman, whose name is Kizo-Tamaria, was educated in this country. The models serve to illustrate the extensive interchange of vegetable products that has been going on during the last few years between the United States and the Empire of the Mikado.

It appears that not a few American fruits are being cultivated largely in the land of the Rising Sun. For example, Japan, has no apples that are good for anything; but apples from New England are being grown in such quantities on the island of Yezo—the northernmost of the Japanese group—as to have become an important commercial article.

The climates of Japan and the United States are much alike, and any plant native to one country seems to thrive in the other astonishingly. From our point of view just now that far Asiatic archipelago is the most prolific source of profitable new types of fruits, as well as of hardy ornamental plants.

From Japan we have obtained our finest varieties of plums, and these are planted all over the eastern part of the Unitaed States, from Connecticut to Florida. The Japanese have a huge white clingstone peach, which, though it does not look at all like any of our varieties, is extremely delicious. They got it from China, however. This is to-day the leading market peach of Georgia.

Some years ago Dr. S. H. Rumph of Marshallville, in that State, planted about ten thousand of the stones, from which he got as many seedling trees. From the lot he chose two that bore the finest fruit, eventually discarding one of them. The other was the parent of the Elberta variety, which has since become famous. Hundreds of carloads of this fruit will be shipped out of Georgia this season.

Another Japanese peach, also originally from China, is the Peento. It is cultivated to a considerable extent in Florida, but blooms too early for a higher latitude.

Speaking of plums, the Japanese grow certain varieties for the blossoms alone. They are extremely fond of spring flowers, and festivals are held annually to celebrate the blossoming of the plum and the cherry. The fruit of these blossom-producing varieties is acrid and of small account. Plums in general in Japan are not valued for eating fresh; they are picked green usually and pickled.

The persimmon is the most important fruit in Japan, corresponding to the apple in the United States. Cultivation of it has been carried to a very high point. There are about thirty well-recognized varieties, most of which are named after the localities in which they are produced. Others take their names from objects which they are supposed to resemble. For example, one variety is known as the "tsuru-no-ko," or "crane's egg." It looks remarkably like a large pink egg, sharply pointed at one end.

Then there is the "yama-tsuru," or "wild crane's egg." Yama means "mountain" literally, animals on the mountain being generally wild. Another variety is called the "yemon," which signifies an heraldic device, the fruit bearing a fancied resemblance to a round badge. The "Yeddo-ichi" is one of those that have a topographical designation, the term meaning "best of Yeddo." This is one of the finest of the varieties which have been introduced into the United States.

All our cultivated persimmons come from Japan. Recently horticulturists in Missouri, Illinois and Indiana have been trying to do something with native American varieties, but none of the latter approaches in size those of the Orient, and as yet they cut no figure commercially.

For some time past the Department of Agriculture has been trying to popularize persimmons in the United States, but they seem to be an acquired taste here, and the demand for them is fickle. Extensive plantations of them have been set out in the Gulf States and California, Florida leading in their production.

Next in importance after the persimmon in Japan comes the pear. Japanese pears look remarkably like apples, and some of them are huge in size. They are not equal to those grown in the United States. A very profitable use has been found for them in this country, by employing the plants as stocks upon which to make grafts. Grafts thus made are found to be in a measure proof against the funguous diseases called "blights."

The Japanese quinces are from China. The oranges of Japan are of the "mandarin" type, such as are found all over Eastern Asia. They grow on dwarf trees. The trees are dwarfed by making the grafts upon deciduous stocks—i. e., plants of the orange kind, which drop their leaves in Autumn. The trees, being dormant in winter, are better able to resist cold. Another orange is the "fingered orange," which is more properly a citron. It has many long finger-shaped protuberances extending from it. The thick rind is made into sweetmeats by immersion in syrup.

The "gumi" of Japan is dried or preserved. It is a berry, related to the "buffalo berry" of our Western plains. The buffalo berry is eaten by Indians and whites, and recently it has been cultivated to some extent. The berries are too acid to be eaten raw, but are very palatable when dried or cooked with sugar. Another Japanese fruit is the "kum-quat;" it looks somewhat like a plum and is preserved whole. Yet another is the "loquat," related to the medlar of Europe. It is grown in Florida and California, being prized for the refreshing flavor of its juice.

The grapes of Japan are very inferior, but fine varieties from the United States are being introduced there.

Japan beats the world in the size of her chestnuts, some of which are as big as two of the largest horse chestnuts. These have been introduced into the United States and are grown here to some extent; but they do not compare in flavor with our native varieties. They must be roasted or boiled in order to be palatable.

Next in commercial importance from the Japanese point of view are walnuts. Seedlings of these have been brought to this country and are likely to produce strains of commercial value. A nut that is a favorite in Japan is the "ginko." The tree that bears it has been planted in this country and prospers here. It is sometimes called the "maidenhair tree," because its leaves look like those of the maidenhair fern, having no ribs. It is said to be one of the most ancient plants in the world, dating back to the coal-forming epoch. —New York World.

OPIUM IN HONOLULU.

An Official Contrives a Scheme for His Own Advantage.

A private letter received from Honolulu throws quite a little light upon the political methods of the de facto government of the islands. In order to satisfy the ministerial conscience, the traffic in opium has been seduously suppressed, measures having been taken to absolutely prohibit its importation. A revenue cutter has been engaged to cruise around the island, and woe betide any daring schooner that attempts a landing. Twenty-five hundred dollars a month is the cost of the government cruiser, and any one found with even an opium pipe in his possession is liable to a fine of $150. But there is a rider to this little penalty. It only applies to pipes which burn smuggled opium, and unless rumor is a lying jade, it is really marvellous how the officers of the law fail to see any deleterious qualities in a certain drug, remarkably like the opium of commerce, which finds its way into Honolulu under the supervision and through the hands of the most prominent harbor official. The latter individual has secured to himself an absolute monopoly of the importation of opium, and as more is consumed in the island now that at any time before, his profits must be something great. As the whole machinery of the government is used to maintain the monopoly, it is hardly likely however, that he is allowed to pocket the whole proceeds.

"My six-year-old daughter, Bella, was afflicted with eczema for 24 months, the principal seat of eruption being behind her ears. I tried almost every remedy I saw advertised, bought innumerable medicines and soaps, and took the child to medical specialists in skin diseases, but without result. Finally, a week ago, I purchased a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and the first application showed the curative effect of the Remedy. We have used only one-sixth of the box, but the change is very marked; the eruption has all disappeared, and I can confidently say my child is cured. (Signed) MAXWELL JOHNSTON. 112 Anne St., Toronto

A PARALLEL CASE.

People in Detroit are Interesied in a Great Resemblance in Two Cases

DETROIT, Mich, Aug. 26.—Much interest has been manifested here over the recovery of Mr. G. H. Kent, of Ottawa, from Bright's disease by using Dodd's Kidney Pills, a remedy which is now in universal use, and many people have a clear recollection of the similar case which occurred in London, Ontario, not long ago, namely, that of Mr. Wm. Langley, who for sometime was an inmate of Harper's Hospital here and was operated upon without effect by several Detroit physicians. It was owing to this connection with Detroit and the long accounts published in the press that so much interest was taken in the case, and led to such an enormously increased sale of the medicine.

CASTORIA
for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. is on every wrapper.
