

THE DAILY EXAMINER.

JULY 16, 1886.

Let the People Judge.

THE Patriot says THE EXAMINER'S article on the Orange Circulars is a "Tory Break-down." In our opinion, that article contains evidence to prove beyond the shadow of a doubt that the charge respecting these circulars, which the Patriot and Messrs. Aitken and White and others have brought against Liberal-Conservatives, is absolutely and entirely false and libellous. But we are content in this matter, as in all others, to let an intelligent people judge.

It is significant, however, that the Patriot is now very solicitous that people should not think the "Liberal Party had anything to do with this 'disgraceful' and 'treacherous' transaction. At first the Patriot's contention was that the Liberal-Conservatives did it; now it is chiefly anxious to prove that the Liberals didn't.

What evidence does the Patriot adduce? Does it quote from the Circulars? No. Does it bring forward any positive evidence that the Liberal Party had nothing to do with the concoction and circulation of those circulars? No. But it states (1) that proscription of "Roman Catholics from office" never was and is not any part of the platform of the Liberal Party of this Island—which may be conclusive to people of very short memories; (2) it points out that in what are known as Roman Catholic Districts, Liberals voted for Catholic candidates,—of course they did; and (3) it says "we never saw the circular."

The first two of these proofs may be dismissed as so false and weak as to be unworthy of notice. The third may be briefly investigated.

Who is this "we" who never saw the circular? Does the Patriot, when it says "we never saw the circular," speak for the Liberal party as a whole? No one supposed for a moment that those circulars were produced and discussed in any convention of the Liberal party—the deed was done in the dark; and it is quite impossible for the Patriot to speak for every member of the Liberal party, or to say,—in face of the most positive evidence that at least one of the Liberal (O) candidates and several of the Liberal (O) canvassers bore an active part in preparing them—that no member of the Liberal party ever saw them. Or does the Patriot, "we" mean the rather numerous staff of the Patriot? To say that none of the writers for the Patriot even saw the circulars is much too thin. Then who is "we"? If by "we" is meant the Patriot, the statement that "we never saw the circular" may be believed; for, literally speaking, a paper "never saw the circular" or anything else. An equivocation such as this is of a piece—only a little worse—with the equivocation of Messrs. Duncan and McLeod, respecting these same circulars. Certainly, it would be well worthy of the Patriot which, on the day before the election, announced that William McLean, Esq., had "abandoned the canvass;" and, when asked for an explanation, denied that it had stated that Mr. McLean withdrew from the contest!

We submit that the "we" of the Patriot is too indefinite a subject to give reliable evidence proving that the Liberal party (so called) had nothing to do with the "Orange Circulars." Most persons will, we venture to say, agree with THE EXAMINER that those who malevolently endeavored to fasten a false charge, involving disgrace and treachery, upon the Liberal Conservative party, are not to be believed when they assert that "we never saw the circular," and "we assert that the circulars were not issued by Liberals." Before the Liberal party can get rid of the odium of issuing the Orange circulars they must, in the first place, obtain an organ more worthy of the credence of the public than the Patriot; and, in the second place, they must, as THE EXAMINER has done for the Liberal Conservative party, bring forward convincing evidence that they had nothing whatever to do with these "disgraceful and treacherous means of influencing the electorate."

The Summerside Journal announces that it is "Independent." In this it does well. But its statement that when advocating Repeat it "speaks for the people," should read, "speaks for its own presiding genius." For ourselves, we have no great opinion of those who are always hoping great things from a change of political condition. We have heard persons who left us at home as they worked away they would have been better off; and as with individuals so with Provinces and nations. Let them do our duty in that free political state of life in which it has pleased God to place us, and we shall do better than by "going in for Repeat" alias Annexation.

"A Cleveland, Ohio, special says that another Canadian vessel is in trouble there. The schooner Jesse Scarth went into Toledo on Saturday last from a Canadian port, and for some reason her master did not report or clear. On arriving at Cleveland he called on the collector of customs, who, thinking that the Scarth was an American vessel, was disposed to be lenient if the proper papers could be obtained from Toledo. The captain took a train to that place and obtained the papers, but in his absence the fact that he sails as a Canadian was discovered, and he will pay a fine of a thousand dollars or be tied up and have his vessel stripped."

Yet the Canadians are bad—very bad—when they punish United States captains for infractions of Canadian laws.

Earthquake in New Zealand.

FURTHER PARTICULARS OF THE CATASTROPHE.

Further details of the earthquakes in New Zealand show that the most violent disturbances were felt in the neighborhood of Rotoma, the severity of the shocks being such that they led many of the people to believe the Island would sink into the sea. The first reports of the volcanic disturbances came from Tauragus, in the Auckland lake district. The natives of that village were sharply awakened from sleep at 2 o'clock in the morning by repeated vivid flashes of lightning, which continued at rapid intervals up to 4 o'clock, when a tremendous earthquake occurred.

When the second shock came, the entire country for miles around was lit up by the glare from a volcano, which had suddenly burst into activity. The scene was as grand as it was awful. Numerous small native villages were totally destroyed. Wairoa was covered to the depth of ten feet with dust and ashes. Rahtomahana was completely engulfed. Twenty-one persons are known to have lost their lives, among whom were several English residents. One old Maori chief at Rotoma was dug out alive after having been buried in ashes 104 hours.

As soon as the news of the fearful occurrence was received at Auckland a government agent made immediate preparations to go to the relief of the sufferers. Wagons were chartered and filled with provisions and clothes. Mr. Johnson, the government agent, on his arrival at Rotoma, sent back the following account:—

"The scene among the mountains, as viewed from the Wairoa road, is terribly grand. Flashes of lightning, peals of thunder and shocks of earthquake are incessant, while dust is falling in heavy showers. In addition to these inconveniences the roads throughout the entire country are covered with several feet of blue clay mud ejected from the volcanoes."

"All vegetation is destroyed, and the aspect of the country is entirely changed. Blue Lake and Lake Kotakakahi have been transformed into mud baths. The outlet of the latter lake is blocked up, and the bridges which cross the lower end are covered with mud. Nearly all the buildings that I have noticed are crushed in by falling mud. At this place Snow's Temperance Hall, the two principal hotels, and are nearly all the other buildings in the town, are completely wrecked. The house occupied by Mrs. Hazzard and her family was borne down by the weight of the debris. Mrs. Hazzard was dug out alive, but four of her children were found dead. Mr. Hazzard is missing. Detailed reports of the foreign residents at other points who were killed have not yet been received."

"The first two of these proofs may be dismissed as so false and weak as to be unworthy of notice. The third may be briefly investigated."

Who is this "we" who never saw the circular? Does the Patriot, when it says "we never saw the circular," speak for the Liberal party as a whole? No one supposed for a moment that those circulars were produced and discussed in any convention of the Liberal party—the deed was done in the dark; and it is quite impossible for the Patriot to speak for every member of the Liberal party, or to say,—in face of the most positive evidence that at least one of the Liberal (O) candidates and several of the Liberal (O) canvassers bore an active part in preparing them—that no member of the Liberal party ever saw them. Or does the Patriot, "we" mean the rather numerous staff of the Patriot? To say that none of the writers for the Patriot even saw the circulars is much too thin. Then who is "we"? If by "we" is meant the Patriot, the statement that "we never saw the circular" may be believed; for, literally speaking, a paper "never saw the circular" or anything else. An equivocation such as this is of a piece—only a little worse—with the equivocation of Messrs. Duncan and McLeod, respecting these same circulars. Certainly, it would be well worthy of the Patriot which, on the day before the election, announced that William McLean, Esq., had "abandoned the canvass;" and, when asked for an explanation, denied that it had stated that Mr. McLean withdrew from the contest!

Another Murder.

THE MURDERER AND HIS VICTIM WELL KNOWN IN CHARLOTTETOWN.

Terence O'Hare, who killed his wife in Portland, Me., on Saturday last, lived in a luxuriously furnished home. He was ostensibly a peddler, but by common reputation a smuggler, who with his wife is said to have got drunk whenever he returned flush with money from his expeditions across the Canadian frontier. On Friday night O'Hare went the rounds of the saloons, and at 10 o'clock was drunk. At half-past four o'clock on Saturday morning he called up a neighbor and asked her to go to his wife who was dead. She found the door open and the house deserted, and the furniture of the first floor in a state of indescribable confusion. She called a Mrs. Hagen and they went up stairs. A similar scene of disorder existed there; on the floor, surrounded by the wreckage of furniture, lay the dead body of Mrs. O'Hare, naked. The woman had evidently been killed after a desperate struggle. The police arrested O'Hare. The Moncton Transcript says that this man, a few years ago, figured in Nova Scotia at the head of a gang of shoddy dealers, who victimized a good many people, and perhaps did a little smuggling as well. O'Hare and his company had their headquarters at Truro for some time, and the house in which they lived was frequently notorious for disturbances growing out of whiskey drinking, which seriously disturbed and annoyed the neighbors. The gang decamped from Truro somewhat suddenly.

O'Hare and his victim are well known in this city. Some ten years ago they resided on Upper Queen Street, and O'Hare was known as a shoddy cloth peddler. Both were hard drinkers, and while drunk were continually fighting, and the services of the police were frequently necessary in order to prevent serious consequences.

A Marvellous Escape.

A Chicago despatch of the 14th inst., says that fifteen children, with their mothers and nurses, narrowly escaped death Tuesday in the destruction of the Lakeside sanitarium at the foot of 25th street. The sanitarium building was a platform 125 feet long, covered by a roof supported on timbers. The sides were inclosed with canvas awnings. Its furniture consisted chiefly of rocking chairs, baby swings and hammocks. On hot days mothers brought children to the place. The hailstorm which struck the city about 4 p. m., was followed by a fierce wind, which came from the lake, striking that portion of the city between 24th and 35th streets. Mrs. Shoeman, the matron, ordered everybody to run to the little building at the north end of the long platform. They were hardly inside when the gale struck the house and nearly wrecked it. Mrs. Shoeman broke open a door and a window. She forced everybody out into the storm, telling them to take refuge in the houses near by. All found shelter. The force of the cyclone broke the roof of the building into pieces and scattered it many feet to the west. The platform was broken and the roof supports were literally pulled out of the ground. All escaped injury as by a miracle.

Obituary

Mr. William Crabbe, jr., an old and respected citizen of Charlottetown, died at his residence, Great George Street, Charlottetown, last night.

Mr. Crabbe, at the time of his death, was in his 65th year. In his early days he worked in this city as a joiner, but being a man of considerable ability, he very soon abandoned that trade and turned his attention to mercantile pursuits, and in the latter occupation he was well known, especially to the people over the River, he having for many years kept the "Ferry Store." He was one of the 94 who signed for Confederation, and it must have been a satisfaction to the deceased gentleman to have lived to have seen his views adopted by the people of the Island, and the Confederation scheme so successfully carried out. Many years ago Mr. Crabbe took an active part in the political questions of the day, and although his first political views were what were then known as Liberal, yet he subsequently became a supporter of the Liberal-Conservative Party. Mr. Crabbe was a valuable contributor to the press, both as a political and humorous writer. During an absence of Mr. J. H. Fletcher from the Island, he was the leading editor of the Island Argus, when that paper strongly supported the Liberal-Conservative Party, and his articles were always pungent and to the point. He was appointed as Assistant Registrar of Deeds, in the year 1870, upon the formation of the Coalition Government, but was removed in 1872, when the Laird-Haythorne Government came into power. In 1873, however, he was again appointed to a position in that office, which he continued to fill with satisfaction to the Government who employed him and the public whom, up to the time of his death, he served. He died, leaving no enemies and many friends—honored and respected by his fellow citizens.

Vernon River Bridge Notes.

The winding river, at the Bridge, comes from Orwell Bay, and it is a pity that only once a fortnight, the Inland Steam Navigation Co. sends a boat this way. The scenery is attractive, and the people are fond of a trip now and then. Depend upon it if the company are not too parsimonious to pay for an extra advertisement in the EXAMINER, let them just try it; and a trip to Vernon River Bridge will give them such a crowd that it will pay, and the advertisement will be paid for, too.

Politics are quiet. The election is dead; all over with it. The Government lives, even though Forbes is our member. He is a pretty good man, though on the wrong side. Mr. Forbes, personally, has at heart the best interests of the Island. Mr. Forbes, politically, has made a mistake; but he is in the Legislature now, and the fact that he polled the largest vote speaks for his personal popularity, and the fact that Government voters voted for him. He owes his election, not to Grits, but to Conservatives.

The dinner bell rings at Port Vernon River House, and appetite invites. We sit down, all things are good and ready. The house is nicely situated, and inside it looks like "at home." Well, it is "at home" as far as a stranger could expect it.

RAMBLER.

July 14, 1886.

Gladstone and Hodge.

Goldwin Smith has just delivered himself of a prophecy in the Week, and it has gone wrong. It must have gone much against the grain to prophecy as he did, because it was in favor of Gladstone, but he did it, and said that the fate of Gladstone depended on the agricultural laborer who knew nothing about Ireland beyond the fact that at harvest time Irishmen came over and competed with him. If he takes it into his head that Home Rule will keep the Irishmen at home, he will be for Home Rule. That probably is the only consideration connected with Ireland which is present to the mind of the real arbiter of an issue respecting the future relations between Ireland and Great Britain, on which the integrity of this nation and the fate of the Empire depend.
