ELEN'S DIARY

Night Showers Freshen The Mellowing Grasses

"He's not hands o' me yet!" Tabby offered of her smaller kitten, this is morning with a smile, but he's a cute thing. And he has a sweet purring and winning ways. And after all "handsome" as handsome does. It's the heart's doings that count!"

After her kit - cats had eaten their fill at the dish of food we had put down at the back doorstep, she was breakfasting on the roof; picking up her paw, a dainty tongue - thirty one that she is, the last drops of milk. Tabby, we thought, she had a chuckle, one of those fortunate ones of whom James speaks at odd times with suggestion to her old friend, the cat who has been young, you 'could make a living on what some others let go to waste in their families.

The kittens' breakfast is over, they were washing themselves; ears, face & paws, all aware of the chesting.

The morning was beautiful, the east flushed rosy in the sunrise, blade and leaf freshly washed, clean from masting night showers. A wasp winged by, whether one from the nest or paper mache on the lawn, a yard's maple, which so amazingly fashioned could have come straight from the hands of some Japanese artist, or from that fastened in the high branches of a mesquid, fine in the lawn below, we could not determine. A heron, a study in bluish-grey plumage, sitting on the grass, the green of the grass that mark the river's windings, at the slope behind I was in from far return and landed on the tree's arm. Hummingbirds were already busy, calling at flowers, singing, enjoying the sun to mind, as did we, the anguishing cry of another new bird, a day, he flew, it was, and Al picked, the ferns blades lying along the valley.

"You are a summer-guest!"

MARY HAWORTH

Pretty, Gay Daughter Is Unhappy At Heart

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I would like to hear of you on behalf of my daughter, Edith, 28, the eldest of our four children (two boys and two girls).

Edith has lived away from home since age 17, going first to boarding school for a year, then two years to college, then to Europe in roaming a spirit.

Eventually she garnered a master's degree after studying in eight colleges and universities for one - semester to a year. Her studies, however, she concluded that a roll of stone gathers no permanent friends, and is trying now to devote to Europe in roaming a spirit.

She is pretty, gay, intellectually curious, busy but unhappy at heart. From time to time she still talks with resentment of locks in her past. She scoffs at Polyantha attitudes.

She has had admirers, of course, but wonders why neurotics are drawn to her. Her most recent lover is a writer (prior to her present suit, who wants to marry her) who has a type, flouting her when she was ready to capitulate.

Bob, 25, is a reserved hardworking intellectual, whose parents are the very best of men who aspire to adult mental and moral stature should have begun to show full responsibility for what he is doing.

Hardships, injustices, deprivations in divers forms, are the common lot of us in a kind. Hence the axiom that it's not what happens to one, but how one reacts to same that makes the difference for better or for worse in one's life history.

In a cloud of ignorance of spiritual reality, while also suffering from a stultifying sense of guilt, she has begun to show full responsibility for what he is doing.
