

Tie Together Bank Holdup, Suicide

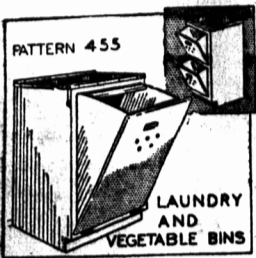

HAMILTON (CP)—An abortive bank holdup and a suicide a few hours later were tied together by police Saturday when they identified a heavily-indebted candy salesman who shot himself to death as one of the holdup men.

Thursday morning two unmasked men, one carrying a stick and the other armed with a snub-nosed revolver, tied up the staff of the Royal Bank of Canada branch in Stoney Creek, five miles east of Hamilton, but left without any money after the manager broke free and sounded an alarm.

That afternoon Joseph Ernest Turcotte, 51, a nearby Aldershot salesman for a candy company, was found shot to death. His property was to have been auctioned to discharge his obligations and police said he had committed suicide.

Workshop Patterns

Pull-out bins are the answer to many household storage problems. Here are two that the home handyman can put to other uses without frustration. Both cabinets are sink and stove high and the directions on the pattern illustrate how to apply heat-proof tops to match kitchen counters. To save space put one of these bins at the end of a passage, in the bathroom or a closet. As a time and motion saver the two-bin vegetable cabinet is unequalled for the space it takes. Pattern for both bins will be mailed for 35 cents. If you are planning a kitchen the packet of five standard patterns for a remodelled kitchen will be useful to you. Price of packet is $1.50. Opening lead—king of spades. The defense got off to a fast start when the king and ace of spades were led, and then a third spade which East trumped. The jack of clubs was returned by East. South won with the king and drew West's three trumps. The declarer then played a club to the ace, and ruffed dummy's last club. Now a diamond was played to the king and a low diamond back. When East played low South finessed the nine which held the trick and made the hand. East claimed that South must have seen one of the defender's hands to have played the diamonds in such an abnormal fashion instead of leading the ace and another diamond in the hope that

West had the queen. This play would of course have lost the contract.

South explained to East that the suggested line of play was not consistent with a policy he had followed since early childhood, namely that he played bridge to win and not to lose, and that if he had followed East's suggested play it would be a complete reversal of his approach to the game. South added also that the possibility of West's having more than one diamond in his hand was non-existent and that he was not in the habit of chasing will-o-the-wisps, despite East's desire that he do so. With this last statement South re-entertained and explained the basis for his plays.

South had noted on the second lead of spades that East had been shortchanged in spades during the deal, having received only one. Eagle-eyed South had made a similar observation when he got around to leading hearts. This meant that West started with six spades and three hearts. South led the hearts purposefully cleared the club suit, because of an overpowering curiosity to learn how many clubs West had started with. When West was able to produce three clubs South knew there was not room in West's hand for more than one diamond. With this explanation East subsided with the mild complaint that South was really seeing through the backs of the cards.

Report U. S. Urges Britain And France Keep Pilots On Job

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States is reported Sunday to have urged Britain and France to keep British and French ship pilots working in the Suez Canal despite failure of talks with Egypt on the future of the waterway.

Diplomatic authorities reported this American view has been expressed in view of unconfirmed reports pilots were planning a mass walkout Sept. 15.

State Secretary Dulles was reported to believe any such walkout might cripple canal operations, creating an even graver dispute with Egypt over the seized waterway. Dulles was reported to be exploring possible next moves since the Cairo talks ended in failure.

An appeal to the United Nations security council is among the steps he is reportedly exploring, informants said, provided tensions now aroused abate sufficiently to permit serious discussions.

The Suez Canal Company nationalized by Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser suspended 187 pilots as of Jan. 1. Of these 56 were French and 32 British.

The Suez company, still a resisting Nasser's nationalization move, was reported to have announced it would not accept a new contract to

BEDTIME STORIES

Bob White Explains

Confusion has its special use, and for it there is some excuse.

BOB WHITE.

Bob White and Mrs. Bob were very proud of their big family. They had ten children who were now as big as their father and mother. The group was still keeping together in one big happy family. During the day when they were hunting for food they sometimes became somewhat separated. But when the Black Shadows first started to creep out from the Purple Hills, Bob White called his family together and made sure that all were there. Then he led them to where he planned for them to spend the night.

From the time the children were very small, Bob and Mrs. Bob had trained them to go to bed in a certain way, and had insisted they should do it just so. Instead of settling themselves as they pleased, they were taught to settle down on the ground, usually under cover of some sort such as tall weeds or grass, and to always sit together in a circle as close as possible with their tails almost or quite touching in the middle. Of course this meant that, sleeping in a circle, each one was facing in a different direction. It seemed a silly thing to one young Bob White. He said as much.

Why do we always have to sleep this way?" he asked. "What difference does it make where each of us is as long as we're under cover? Why wouldn't we be just as safe if we were scattered about a little?"

"It is very simple," explained Bob White. "We are safer sleeping as we do than we could be sleeping in any other way."

"I don't see how," declared the young Bob White.

"Because," replied his father, "many ears together are very much more likely to hear any unusual sounds. Reddy Fox might creep up on one of you sleeping alone and you might not waken. But if he should try creeping up on all of us sleeping together, some one would be almost sure to hear him in time. Then we would all take to our wings at once. Because each would be flying in a different direction, some would get in the way of another. We would not bump into each other. Do you see now?"

The young Bob White nodded his pretty head. I guess I do,
