Fund Raising Groups Ponder Common Name

The various fund-raising organizations in Canada may adopt a common name, "United Community Fund", if a suggestion made yesterday towards the end of a two-day Atlantic regional conference of the Community Funds and Councils of Canada is taken by the individual boards concerned.

Group Captain Billy Lea, Ottawa, chairman of the public relations committee, National Welfare Council, proposed the "UCF" name. Delegates, representing eight fund-raising groups, three provincial governments and the federal government, will discuss the matter of the name with their own groups, the change will then be made to the Canadian Welfare Council. It was also suggested that the base of support for the Maritime School of Social Work in the south end of Halifax be extended to include all Maritime community funds. The school is presently supported only by government grants and by the Halifax-Dartmouth United Appeal. This idea will also be taken back to individual boards for discussion. The 1966 conference of the

Judge Darby, Dr. MacKinnon Address PWC's 85 Graduates

Prince of Wales College graduates face many challenges in a world of "new and wider horizons", Judge W.E. Darby of Summerside said at the college convocation yesterday.

Addressing the 85-member graduating class at ceremonies in Confederation Centre theatre, Judge Darby said the advances of the past would "seem puny and small in comparison with the changes of this century."

He told the graduates they might have to be the new leaders in an age in which "economic and political thinking will have to be revamped."

Along with the technical advances of the age, "man's ingenuity has at the same time released terrible forces, which, unless controlled, could mean the destruction of the planet."

BEYOND UNIVERSITY
Judge Darby told the class "education can and must be prolonged beyond the walls of the university."

"Through reading, the whole range of human knowledge—science and philosophy—lies open before you."

He said the graduates must not be afraid of hard work, testing their capacities, or giving of themselves. "These are the keystones to accomplishment."

One example of an achievement which many would not have believed possible a few years ago for such a small community was the construction of the theatre in which the convocation was being held, and the complex of which it was a part.

Judge Darby paid tribute to Prince of Wales College principal Dr. Frank MacKinnon for "the tremendous role he played in this remarkable achievement."

Stressing the importance of contributing to the growth of their home province, the speaker told class members "opportunities can lie open right here in Prince Edward Island for a successful career in almost all fields."

If some of them decided to leave the island, however, "whatever you do, do it as Canadians—surely in Canada you can find scope for all your abilities and talents."

The largest graduating class in the history of the college received diplomas from Lieut. Gov. W.J. MacDonald, who also presented diplomas, certificates and prizes to students completing first, second and third years.

Hon. L.G. Dewar, chairman of the board of trustees of PWC, was master of ceremonies.

The valedictory was delivered by Robert Bentley. DR. MACKINNON SPEAKS
In his principal's report, Dr. MacKinnon advised the graduates to avoid becoming "self-appointed trustees of other people's business."

"Too many people get the idea they must run something rather than do something themselves as well," he said. "It is easy to shirk one's own work and run a committee or tell other people what to do."

"Our organized and pluralistic society has many distinguished servants of the public well by their actual work. It also has many hyper-active busybodies who love to run things and tell other people what to do, who meddle in things they know little about and, in almost all cases, obstruct ideas and actions for which they themselves can get no credit."

Dr. MacKinnon told the class to beware of and beware of being such people.

In his opening remarks the principal, speaking of the location of the ceremonies said: "It is fitting that this place which honours the men who founded Canada should now honour young Canadians who will be helping to shape the nation's destiny in its second century."

CHALLENGING TIMES
Dr. MacKinnon urged the avoidance of what he termed "blind alley education"—"preparation for one occupation, one line of thinking, one mode of living, one set of interests. The times are 'far too frightening, exciting and challenging for the limiting confines of narrow outlook and thinking too prevalent in education today," he said.

"Curriculum planning, which tends to be a generation behind the times, is due for drastic alteration," the principal said, going on to predict that "in a decade or two French will be mastered by grade four... an oriental language may be in the high school curriculum; elementary university mathematics of today will be in grade seven and eight... the history of China, Japan, Russia, India and other nations far more populous than ours will be on our school bookshelves; and astronomy... will reappear in the schools. And in religious instruction young Christians will find it necessary to learn something of the beliefs of Hindus, Buddhists, Mohammedans and others who greatly outnumber them."

PAID TRIBUTE
Dr. MacKinnon paid tribute to physics department head James B. Brown who retired from the faculty last summer.

"In the long history of Prince of Wales few have matched the skill and devotion to duty of Mr. Brown. He stayed trained and he carried the results with great benefit into the technical fields of science. One university dean told me Mr. Brown was the best physics teacher in the Maritimes and I believe it," the principal said.

Dr. MacKinnon also extended his thanks to Hugh Stevenson and Ian Brown of the history department who were in charge of detailed arrangements when the Conference of Learned Societies met at Prince of Wales last June.

"Almost two thousand educationalists registered and were accommodated and entertained. This event marked the first time that this important meeting was held in a smaller college in a small city rather than in a large university in a large city, and it was most successful."

Dr. MacKinnon concluded by wishing the graduates good luck and advising them to "live fully, live dangerously, live nobly." "To Heaven with prayers; to Hell with your troubles."

Charlottetown, and David Thomas Long of West Royalty were each fined $10 and costs or 10 days in jail.

Residents of Rustico, Mr. Buchanan and Hunter River pleaded guilty to possession of liquor in places other than their residences and each was fined $20 and costs or 30 days.

Northumberland Ferries Ltd. Ups Schedule

Northumberland Ferries Ltd. will step up its sailing schedule during the holiday weekend to handle the increase in traffic expected to travel to and from the mainland.

Capt. Claude Hunter said last night ferries between Wood Islands and Carleton Place will sail at 8 a.m., 10 a.m., 12 noon, 2 p.m., 4 p.m. and 6 p.m. today and Monday.

This schedule will mean two more sailings will be made from each side.

It is expected the ferries will revert to the regular schedule of four crossings Sunday, however.

The ferries also made one additional sailing yesterday.

Captain Hunter said ice in the strait had ceased to be a problem for the ferries, for the time being, at least.

Heavy ice conditions earlier this week had interrupted the ferry service.
