THE KING'S ROSE DIAMOND

By GEORGE GRIFFITH.

Mr. Muratti, Esq., M. L. A., director of many important financial undertakings, but in those days he was just an extremely clever man, a Jew of reputed Florentine ancestry, but more recent and authentic east end extraction, who had made his debut in Kimberley as a dealer in cheap jewelry and sloop made outfits—after having wandered about picking up a living by the display of his juggling abilities—and who was now looked upon as one of the smartest and most successful "operators" on the diamond fields.

Inspector Lipinski and some of his more trusted subordinates cherished certain suspicions as to the scope of his operations, but so far his dealings had been blameless, at least so far as tangible evidence was concerned, added to which he had recently married a very pretty and exceedingly clever wife, which meant much on the fields in those days.

Mr. Muratti did not seem in the least annoyed by the apparent reference to his former comparatively humble means of livelihood. On the contrary, he looked up with a quick glance at Ridley and said with a smile of pleasant anticipation:

"Well, I haven't done anything in the old clo' line for some time now, but you know, I'm always on for a trade. What's the figure?"

"Ten thousand."

"I'll see you—I mean I'd like to see the goods first before I say anything to that. It's a big price for a pair of second-hand boots, you know, Mr. Ridley. Still, I'm glad to see that you're beginning to rise to a proper sense of your opportunities. When can I see the boots?"

"I was thinking of taking them down to Tooley's tomorrow about this time to have them soled and heeled."

"So you're on to that lay, are you? Well, you're not such a blighted idiot as I thought you were, Ridley, so I apologize. I shall be sending to Tooley's myself. But, look here, if we mean business, what's the good of wasting time like that? Go and get your boots now and take them to Tooley's. He isn't shut, and he's got a pair of mine to mend. I'll be there in half an hour, and if I take your parcel away with me instead of my own—well, what's that to anybody but you or me?"

It wasn't altogether a new device, but it worked, and in the result Mr. Muratti's valuation of the boots was so far satisfactory that about two hours later Frank Ridley went home with a check for $2,500 and an I O U for a like amount in his pocket and a pair of another man's boots under his arm, neatly wrapped up in a copy of The Diamond Fields Independent. The check was on Lloyds' bank, London, and was payable not to Frank Ridley, but to Miss Alice Ransome. The I O U was personal, but both went to England by the next mail.

There occurs here the unpleasant necessity of adding that the check was stopped by cable long before Miss Ransome had any chance of presenting it. The fate of the I O U was to be determined later on. Meanwhile Mr. Frank Ridley's thoughts turned homeward and mingled with loving memories and fond anticipations.

That same night between 11 and 12 Mr. Muratti had a visit from a man of his own people, a youth of some 21 summers, whose life had so far been mostly winter. Not many of the seed of Abraham run to waste, at any rate in the financial sense, but Joshua Mosenstein, known for short in camp as Jossey Mo, had somehow managed to do so.

He was distantly related to Mickey Muratti, and again and again that rising financier had, with the traditional generosity of his people to their kindred, metaphorically taken him out of the gutter and set him on his feet on the pavement. The subject of their interview that particular night was closely akin to this species of rescue work. No one else was present, and Mr. Muratti spoke plainly and to the point.

"It just comes to this, Jossey," he said, toward the end of the discussion, "you'll never be any good to yourself or any credit to your relations as long as you go sloshing around in this good-for-nothing sort of way of yours. Now here's a good solid chance for you. Do as I tell you, man. Own up and play the greeny. You won't get more than five years as a first offender, and if you behave yourself you'll get out with three. I know the ropes down yonder, don't you fear, and I'll pull 'em hard for you. Then when you come out there's $5,000 for you in solid cash and $1,000 a year for five years after that. Now, Jossey, what do you say to that?"

"What do you want me to be trapped at all for?" the tempted Joshua objected rather sulkily. "If you've got the gonivahs, why don't you plant 'em somewhere safe and run 'em down when you get a chance, like the others do?"

"Because I don't do business like the others," replied Mickey with an air of conscious pride, "and because I'm playing a deeper game and for a bigger stake. It's this way, you see: Ridley and me were shadowed while we were talking in Stockdale street. He didn't see it, but I did, and that's what made me think of this lay. We were shadowed again at Tooley's, and I was followed home here by one of the smouches.

"Now, Lipinski's no fool, nor any of them. What do I want talking to Ridley for just after he's come out of the sorting room? What do I want to meet him again the same night at a boot store and bring a pair of his boots home by raitake for?"

"I'll tell you, Jossey, these chaps know as well as I do that I took a parcel of stones from Ridley tonight, and before long Lipinski will be here with a search warrant to look for them. Now, if he doesn't find any he'll reckon that I've planted 'em, and I'm going to run 'em as you say. That means that we shall be watched and that every one who goes out of camp, especially any one belonging to me, will be stopped and searched, and so the missis'll have about as much chance of getting those stones down to Cape Town and on to the steamer as I would.

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND

Information for Tourists and Others Time Tables, etc.

Prince Edward Island has many attractions for tourists, and it is expected that this season the influx of visitors will be very large.

HOW TO GET TO CHARLOTTETOWN

The steamer Halifax leaves Boston for Charlottetown every Saturday at noon and will be due at Charlottetown on Monday night. On the following Tuesday at one she will leave on return to Boston. Halifax and Port Hawkesbury are called at every trip. Passengers may take the steamer at any of the ports mentioned. The Halifax will be supplemented by the Grand Duchess later in the season.

The steamer City of Ghent plies between Halifax and Charlottetown each week, calling at several ports en route. She is due here every Thursday.

The steamers Coban, Bonavista, Campana, Tiber and Polino, of Montreal, also make Charlottetown a port of call.

Passengers for this Province coming by way of Pictou are brought to Charlottetown by the steamer Princess. Those coming by way of Point Du Chevre connect with the steamer Northumberland, and may come through to Charlottetown by the mail special which leaves Summerside each evening immediately after the steamer reaches that port.
