PRECISION plays an important part in the manufacture and assembly of the Special-Six. It is largely responsible for the dependable service that has singled out this Special-Six as an incomparable value.

Six hundred and eighty inspectors safeguard precision in the Studebaker factories. They literally inspect every part that goes into every car—and every operation on every part. Before a car is passed for delivery 9,500 inspections are made.

In the Special-Six there are 1,120 mechanical operations to the accuracy of one-thousandth of an inch, 360 to one-half-thousandth.

As to the car's performance, a brief experience will reveal its superiority far more convincingly than we could tell it.

Studebaker cars make friends quickly, because they give most for the money. And they invariably keep these friends, because of the universal satisfaction they give in fine performance, economy and service.

THIS IS A STUDEBAKER

Was the Big Bout 'One of Those Things'
NEW YORK, June 30—Another one of "those things" has gone down on fistiana's books for future unfolding. Perhaps some day when Jack Britton, welterweight champion, and Benny Leonard, light weight champion, are old and garulduy they will tell what happened, or what led up to the incident in the 13th round of their welter weight championship fight last night when Leonard took a swing at Britton when he was down and lost on a foul.

It will take a lot of argument to convince the hard boiled among the 15,000 who saw the fight last night that it was not a fake. Britton came into the thirteenth round leading on points. He was getting tired, and Leonard looked like he was going out with his big bid for the welterweight title.

Leonard landed a hard left to the stomach. Britton folded his hands over his abdomen and sank to one knee, looking up at Referee Patsy Haley.

Haley leaned over him, shaking his head, and said: "No foul." Leonard then rushed around the referee and hit Britton. Just as this happened, Charley Leonard, Benny's brother, jumped into the ring from the champion's corner, and Haley pushed Britton back to his corner, declaring Leonard the loser on a foul.

"What the h— did you do that for?" Haley yelled at Benny. "He wasn't down."
"He had his knee on the floor," Leonard replied.

Britton, after the fight, said the left to the stomach had taken the wind from him and he went down to take the count of nine. He made no argument about Haley's decision.

As far as is known now, it was no big gambling game, because the wise money was going down at 2 to 1 and 3 to 1 that Leonard would win on points and even money that it would be a draw.

Timber From Live and Dead Trees
Prejudice exists in some quarters against the use of timber cut from dead trees. Recent investigations made by the United States Forest Product Laboratory, however, indicate that timber cut from insect or fire killed trees is just as good for any structural purpose as that cut from live trees of similar quality, providing the wood has not been subsequently injured by decay or further insect attack. If a tree stands on the stump too long after it is killed, the sapwood is likely to become decayed or badly infested by wood-boring insects, and in time the heartwood also will be similarly affected. The same thing is true of logs cut from live trees and not properly cared for. Until the wood becomes affected by these destructive agents, dead-wood should be just as strong and just as durable as sound live tree wood.

In considering the subject it may be useful to remember, says the laboratory report, that the heartwood of a living tree is entirely dead, and in the sapwood only comparatively few cells are living. Most of the wood cut from trees is dead, therefore, regardless of whether the tree itself is living or not.
